BY JAMES H. EVERHART

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Senate, which must have thought it was finished with agricultural issues last December after passage of the 1985 Farm Bill and the emergency Farm Credit legislation, once again spent much of the week absorbed in agriculture.

In a major move, the upper chamber confirmed presidential confidante Richard Lyng as the new Secretary of Agriculture Thursday, ending three weeks of uncertainty in the high command at USDA.

The Senate also approved a package of Farm Bill revisions, including a controversial dairy provision to substitute a 10-cent assessment for the 4.3-percent cut required by the Gramm-Rudman budget-cutting legislation

Lyng, who was California's Director of Agriculture while Reagan was governor of that state in the 1960s, was also Deputy USDA Secretary during the first five years of the Reagan Administration.

A long-time Reagan advisor on farm issues, Lyng was approved by a voice vote of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and confirmed by an overwhelming 98-2 margin later in the day. Only dairy state Senators William Proxmire of Michigan and Donald Riegel of Michigan opposed the appointment.

Lyng replaces John Block, who stepped down Feb. 14 after five years as USDA chief.

Meanwhile the Senate also adopted a package of Farm Bill revisions containing the dairy industry's antidote to the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-cutting measure passed by the Congress late last year.

The key dairy provision would substitute a 10-cent-per-hundredweight production assessment for the 4.3-percent reduction in support price required by the budget-cutting legislation.

In effect, the Gramm-Rudman cut would have required a 50-cent drop in the support price, a move that would have dropped prices for all dairy products, not just those sold in surplus.

By spreading the assessment across all milk sold in the U.S. and not just the 10 percent of production purchased by the Commodity Credit Corporation, the measure would maintain dairy prices at current levels. The assessment is designed to raise enough money to equal the 4.3-percent cut required by Gramm-Rudman.

Adopted by a voice vote in the Senate Thursday, the measure was stalled in political maneuvering in the House of Representatives. The assessment proposal had been raised several times in the House over the past week, according to Doni Dondero, a legislative aide for the National Milk Producers Federation.

Reportedly some urban congressman were opposing the measure, citing it as a special exception that would thwart the intent of the Farm Bill and the Gramm-Rudman legislation. A coalition of dairy industry groups has lobbied strongly for the proposal.

The Administration has not taken a stand publicly on the issue, though, there are indications it has opposed the measure privately.

The fate of Pennsylvania's Extension Service hangs in the balance as Congress considers future budget cuts.

Budget cuts cloud Extension's future

BY SUZANNE KEENE

LANCASTER — Federal funding to Pennsylvania Extension Service has already been reduced because of Gramm-Rudman, and more cuts will surely follow next year

But how big those cuts will be and what effect they will have on the Extension program is still uncertain

Federal funds for Extension were cut 4.9 percent for fiscal 1986, part of an overall $11.7 billion budget reduction package designed to cut the federal deficit. To adjust for the cut, which amounts to about a half a million dollars, the Extension Service is holding open 20 county agent and 10 state staff positons, reports Richard Phillips, assistant director of the Pennsylvania Extension Service.

The financial outlook for fiscal 1987 is even gloomier. In his proposed budget for next year, President Reagan has called for a 60 percent decrease in Extension allocations. In 1986, the Extension Service received $10,400,000 in federal funds; that amount would be slashed to $3,990,000 in 1987 should Reagan's budget be approved intact.

A 60 percent cut in federal funds would represent about a 30 percent drop in the total operating budget of the Extension Service, which gets approximately half its funding from the federal government and half from the state, Phillips said.

What programs would be cut or altered to accommodate a smaller budget has not yet been decided, he said. However, Phillips noted, in the documentation accompanying Reagan's budget proposal, the president indicated: "that Extension agents may provide other services only after the needs of farm operators have been met."

That statement, Phillips said, has been interpreted as limiting federal monies to agricultural

Officials report success in eradicating flu

BY JACK HUBLEY

LANCASTER — After three quiet weeks on the front lines, Pennsylvania poultry experts are ready to declare a victory in the latest skirmish with avian influenza.

"I think it's over," the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation's executive director, John Hoffman, told a group of industrymen at Poultry Progress Day held at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center on Thursday. The last confirmed case of the deadly H5N2 virus involved a flock of 6,200 turkeys in the Pitman area that was depopulated on Feb. 19.

Although officials are taking a hard look at a Lebanon County gamebird flock where virus antibodies have turned up, no live virus had been uncovered as of Thursday. "We feel we have broken the original source of contamination and the secondary spread by our own industry," Hoffman said.

The source that Hoffman was referring to was the New York live bird market, where surveillance had uncovered live virus at at least six market locations in New York City since the current outbreak began after Christmas.

Johanna Farms buys Atlantic Processing

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

FLEMINGTON, NJ — There will be almost no impact on farmers from Johanna Farms, Inc.'s acquisition of an Allentown processing facility, officials said here this week.

"The farmers will notice no differences, and will be better financially," Ken Rosenthal, vice president of Johanna Farms Inc., noted while commenting on its recent acquisition of Atlantic Processing, Inc., Allentown.

The purchase includes Atlantic's processing facilities for fluid milk, juice, ice cream and cultured products, as well as the rights to its trademarks.

Johanna Farms and Atlantic Processing will continue to supply milk to the markets under the names Lehigh Valley Farms, Johanna Farms, Harbisons, Abbotts, Sealtest and Montco. Basically, Atlantic is now out of the processing business, but will continue to market milk to Johanna and Beatrice Foods.

The processing facilities purchased by Johanna are located in Allentown, Lansdale, Schuylkill Haven and State College, Pennsylvania and in Baltimore and Salisbury, MD.

Alpheus Ruth, president of Lehigh Valley Farmers, said that Johanna approached the organization originally.

Johanna's interest began with an informal agreement to bottle milk for Atlantic, after a fire last May prevented milk from being processed at the Lansdale plant.

Johanna was interested in expanding its market west further into Pennsylvania and south deeper into Maryland and Virginia, Rosenthal pointed out. And the experience with Atlantic indicated a closer tie would be beneficial.

The acquisition would also move the company closer to its markets and permit it to operate all phases of its operation more efficiently.

A prime interest in this acquisition was Atlantic's ice cream and cultured products plants. Kurt Goldman, president of Johanna, said "The acquisition of this business will provide us with new capacity for our fluid milk and juice operations, as well as an entry into the ice cream and cottage cheese business."

The ice cream plant will also provide a ready outlet for the cream from their fluid milk plant in Flemington, NJ.

Johanna previously marketed fluid milk in New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, northern Virginia and Washington. Its juice and yogurt products were sold from Maine to Florida and as far west as Colorado.

Milk will continue to be supplied by the remaining section of Atlantic and its member cooperatives: Lehigh Valley Farmers, Dairylea, Mount Joy, Cumberland Valley Milk Producers and Capitol Milk Producers.

The business will be operated by a new subsidiary of Johanna,

WE WORK FOR THE FARMER!

PENNSYLVANIA TOBACCO AUCTION, INC

ATTENTION TOBACCO FARMERS

We Thank All Farmers And All Buyers For Supporting Our New Tobacco Marketing Method In Pennsylvania:

AUCTION!

It is our opinion that your support of the auction, and your strength in numbers to hold your Type 609 tobacco until the auction opened, brought the market prices of your Type 609 tobacco to acceptable market prices. It is our opinion that the Type 41 tobacco market prices were acceptable on TOP quality Type 41 tobacco.

It is up to you farmers to decide what to plant next year!

We feel that demand will be here for Type 609 tobacco; however, it is important to remember that demand is strongest in December and January and quality will be very important. We feel that demand will continue to exist for Type 609 largely due to lower support prices in the Burley markets. We also feel that there will continue to be a demand for local Type 41 tobacco. Quality again will be very important. Hopefully we have stimulated more demand for this type of leaf through the work of various southern buyers.

We have already begun to prepare for next years tobacco marketing season. We will do everything we can this year to create more demand in our locally grown tobacco leaf. We will also be working and supporting various publications in Lancaster Farming providing information on planting, growing, harvesting, & marketing your tobacco.

We will continue to have phone hours to answer any questions you may have on Tuesdays & Wednesdays from 1 to 5 p.m.

Please refer to auction news in Lancaster Farming for the seasons averages.

Assessment vs. price cut

Congress is considering an industry-backed proposal to allow the money saved by a 4.3-percent Gramm-Rudman cut in milk support prices to be raised by a producer assessment.

Let's emphasize from the outset that no one likes to see prices drop for any reason. But a 10-cent assessment is better than a 50-cent drop in support price. And it makes a lot more sense for America's hard-pressed dairymen.

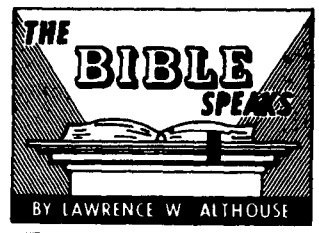
Farmers have been the first to call for fiscal responsibility in Washington...and they're not being hyprocritical in asking for relief now. They're willing to accept the burden of Gramm-Rudman, but they'd like a more equitable way to distribute it.

Congress presumably had a reason for establishing dairy price support figures contained in the 1985 Farm Bill. Are we to accept the idea that Congress didn't really mean what it said, or worse yet, has changed its collective mind in just two short months?

For many producers, the rapid decline in milk prices over the past two years has driven much of the profit out of dairying. And given the startup costs, a whole generation of younger dairymen may be squeezed out of business.

The 50-cent Gramm-Rudman cuts, on top of those reductions, we feel, could play havoc with the dairy industry...and ultimately with the supply of milk to consumers.

It's time for Congress to think of the long-term consequences, and pass legislation substituting a 10-cent assessment for a 50-cent Gramm-Rudman cut in support prices.



GLAD TO SUFFER?

March 9, 1986

Background Scripture: 1 Peter 2:11 through 5:14.
Devotional Reading: 1 Peter 2:21-25.

I cannot remember ever having to suffer for being a Christian. No one has attacked me physically for my faith, nor have I even been forced to suffer any verbal abuse or discrimination. Actually, my Christian discipleship has been pretty safe and secure — and perhaps yours has been, too!

So, in 1 Peter when we are told to "rejoice in so far as you share Christ's sufferings . . .", I find it difficult to identify with what the writer is saying. To be sure, I live in a relatively tolerant and secure society and the original readers of 1 Peter did not. Because they confessed and attempted to follow Christ, they were vulnerable to terrible persecution.

REJOICE IN SO FAR . . .

But, there's more to it than that, isn't there? 1 Peter is not just warning them that the Christian faith may be dangerous for their health, but, on a much more positive note, he is suggesting to them that in suffering there is something for which they can rejoice — and that is where I find myself having trouble. How can I be glad to suffer? There seems to be something unnatural in that.

This difficulty I have with the concept of suffering is further engendered by some experiences I have had with a few Christians who actually sought to suffer as martyrs. They wanted to be martyrs and they enjoyed their martyrdom. Does God want us to go out and actually find ways so that we can suffer for his sake?

I doubt it. I really doubt it. But then what do I do with 1 Peter and his admonition to rejoice in suffering?

Perhaps the clue is to be found in 1 Peter 3:17 when he says: "For it is better to suffer for doing right, if that should be God's will, then for doing wrong." And in 1 Peter 4:15: "But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or a thief, or a wrongdoer, or a mischief-maker..." Let none of us seek to suffer or be martyrs, but if suffering does come, let it be because of our faith in Christ, not our wrongdoing. Let us be glad that, if we must suffer, it is for our refusal to betray our Christ with words and deeds. And, if we are able to do that, is that not cause for rejoicing?

ENTRUST YOUR SOULS

Christian martyrdom, then, is not something to be sought, nor is it to be run from. If we are confronted with the choice of suffering or debasing our discipleship, let us choose suffering as the better of the two evils. Because no good thing can result from my failure to remain loyal to Christ, but very often with the help of God we can turn our suffering into something good — particularly "good" for the cause of Christ. And let us then rejoice that we have found the faith to make that choice, to "do right" and "entrust" our souls to "a faithful creator."

To Plan Weed Control Program

Weeds continue to be one of the major factors in reduced crop yields. This is true in the garden as well as in the field. The battle to control weeds is not a new one; years ago cultivation was the only method of weed control. Now, herbicides are widely used for weed control. However, we still have too much crop damage from weeds.

An agronomist once said that for every pound of weeds produced, the crop yield was reduced by the same weight. Some weeds amount to several tons per acre; this means that much less of the desired crop. Follow the recommendations in the Agronomy Guide and plan for a better weed control program this year.

To Be Aware of Rural Crime

Crime in rural areas continues to climb. Many thieves are drawn to rural communities because of the attitude that crime is a city problem, so it's safe to leave your doors unlocked. As long as this notion persists, rural areas will remain a thieve's paradise. You can make it less so by forcing a burglar to work harder. Install dead bolt locks on all exterior doors and windows. Keep in mind they work only if you use them.

Get to know your neighbors; they can be a great crime deterrent. Agree to watch their place while they're away and they'll gladly do the same for you. It's important to identify your property. Police won't return items unless they're positively identified. Private gas pumps and storage tanks are popular targets for thieves. Be sure to lock these up whenever you aren't around. Exterior lights around your home, garage and barn will also do a lot to ward off burglars.

To Avoid Soil Compaction

One of the real dangers of being in too big a hurry in getting on the soil in the spring with heavy equipment is that we pack this wet soil so hard that poor yields result. With modern machinery, the weight is much more than a team of horses or mules. As a result we have ground that is as hard as concrete and it is slow to recover.

It is important to wait until the soil is dried out sufficiently before taking this heavy equipment over the fields. When the soil is worked too wet, it becomes hard and forms clods. This type of soil structure will not give you the best yields. Don't be in too big a hurry; slow down and wait for the weather catch up to you.

To Prune Fruit Trees

Whether you have a few or several hundred fruit trees, orchard pruning need not be delayed until spring. It may be started in colder weather. But it is a good practice to work on the hardiest trees first.

Early pruning can involve some problems from winter injury, but in many cases an early start will be necessary to complete pruning of large orchards before spring. By confining early work to the older, hardier trees, fruit growers keep injury to a minimum.

Apple and pear trees are the hardiest of the fruits, with plums and sour cherries next in order. Because peach, and sweet cherries are most tender, delay their pruning, particularly the younger trees, until later in March.

DEKALB-PFIZER GENETICS

DEKALB

We have the alfalfa seed you need.

120 Wins 1985 World Forage Superbowl.

DEKALB 120

- Superior yields, year after year
- Outstanding winterhardiness
- Fine stemmed and leafy — high in protein
- Resistance to Phytophthora root rot
- 1984 and 1985 Forage Analysis Superbowl winner

DEKALB Brand 120 swept the Forage Analysis Superbowl held during the World Dairy Expo in 1985.

Orland and Dan Reimer took top honors. It was their DEKALB Brand 120 that captured a first and second in the hay and haylage divisions.

High-quality alfalfa like 120 is important to the Reimers' 92-cow Holstein operation in Loganville, Wisconsin.

"Our crude protein levels have been as high as 26.8 percent. The fourth and fifth crops ran over 24 percent," says Dan, who farms 435 acres with his father, Orland.

DK 135 and Advantage Results In The World Forage Superbowl.

DK 135

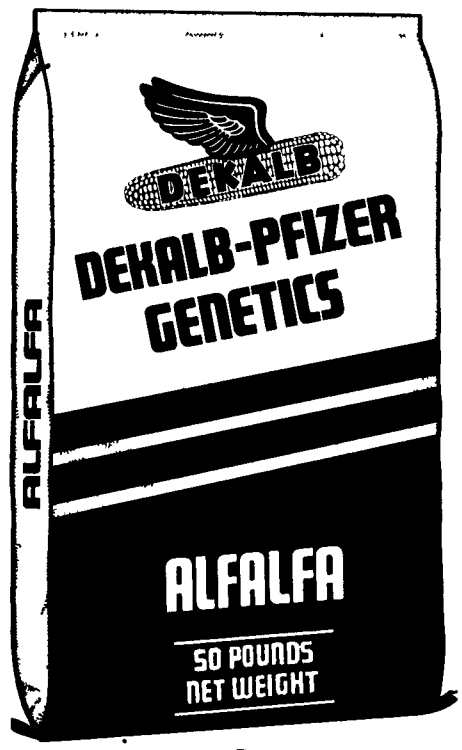
- Excellent yields.
- Verticillium wilt, anthracnose and Phytophthora root rot resistance
- Lush, leafy forage
- Bred for long rotations

Paul Sprecher, Sauk City, Wisconsin
Dairy and Diversified Cropping
DK 135
3rd Place - 1st Cutting Hay - 1985
"We had a little bit of everything this year, from drought to Verticillium wilt and our 135 stood up excellent. This was our first year for seeding. Our first cutting stood over 30 inches high with leaves right down to the bottom of the plant. And only 25 days after our second cutting we came back through for our third."

Advantage

- Outstanding yield performance in state trials
- Recovers quickly after cutting
- Healthy for long stand life
- Resistance to anthracnose and Phytophthora root rot

Forrest Stricker, Wernersville, Pennsylvania
Dairyman
Advantage
3rd Place - 1st Cutting Haylage - 1985
"We made five cuttings this season. Advantage showed good tonnage and quick regrowth. My average was 1.4 tons dry bay equivalent. Alfalfa is the key to our operation and DEKALB has the best alfalfa lineup. My cows have convinced me of that."



DEKALB is a registered brand name. Numbers designate varieties. As a condition of sale please note statement of limited warranty and remedy on DEKALB PFIZER GENETICS orders, tags and bags.

PSU prof named weed 'innovator'

UNIVERSITY PARK – Nathan L. Hartwig, associate professor of weed science at The Pennsylvania State University, was recently named 1986 "Innovator of the Year" by the Northeastern Weed Science Society for his research on the use of crownvetch as a "living mulch."

The award is given for innovation in weed science, including teaching, research and extension.

Hartwig's work has shown that the characteristics that make crownvetch an excellent groundcover also make it an excellent mulch for crop production Crownvetch is currently used in no-till and minimum-till corn, small grains and forages, and shows longer-range potential for use in other cropping systems

His research has demonstrated the value of crownvetch in alleviating soil erosion and in reducing nutrient and pesticide run-off

The Innovator of the Year award is sponsored by the American Hoechst Corp

While at the NEWSS Conference in January, Hartwig presented papers on the best way to kill orchard grass before planting no-till corn, and on the feasibility of using two grass herbicides that kill weed grasses and leave forage grasses such as alfalfa unharmed

Ellis named to Water Task force

TRENTON – New Jersey Farm Bureau President Walter Ellis has been appointed to serve on a four-state task force that will consider alternative financing plans for water projects crucial to the Delaware River Basin area

The task force, called the Walter Project Financing and Water Charges Advisory Committee, will make its recommendations to the Delaware River Basin Commission. Members, selected to represent commercial, agricultural, industrial and regulatory groups, are from New Jersey, New York, Delaware and Pennsylvania.

Ellis said a major topic for the task force's consideration will be whether a water-user fee structure should be implemented, and, if so, how it should be applied.

"I do not want to see our farmers faced with fees for using water," Ellis said. "Farmers do not need yet another expense to eat into potential profits that are increasingly difficult to come by. Farmers have had a difficult time for the past four years, with Mother Nature and market prices combining to put more and more farmers in debt."

Ellis served on the Citizens Advisory Committee to the Drought Emergency Task Force and he is a current member of the State Water Supply Advisory Council. The Drought Emergency Task Force was created to aid state officials during the past summer's drought. The Water Supply Advisory Council is comprised of gubernatorial appointments.

The Delaware River Basin Commission is faced with statutory restrictions in its efforts to finance several water projects-the Francis Walter Reservoir Modification and the Blue Marsh Beltzville water projects.

"There are statutory restrictions which curtail the ability of the DRBC to finance additional water projects," Ellis explained "Anyone who was a user prior to the DRBC compact cannot be charged for water projects under the old rules."

Ellis underscored the need for New Jersey's farmers to obtain water usage certificates, which establish a pattern of usage and protect farmers from unfair allocations. The certificates, which are filed with local county agricultural agents, estimate a farm's annual water usage The certificate is good for five years, although annual updates are required

"Farmers should obtain these certificates for a purely selfish reason – protection," Ellis said "Although agriculture received favorable treatment during the past drought, water allocation is and will continue to be a critical issue for all of New Jersey "

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett

The gambler in a farmer

Last week I mentioned a statement made by a gambler. A few days later my youngest son was playing what he calls his favorite "exercise" song. It was a Kenny Rogers hit called "The Gambler".

Part of the lyrics go like this: You got to know what to keep and what to throw away — You got to know when to hold up, when to fold up — when to walk away and when to run.

The gambler in the song is telling a young man how to handle life and advertsities in the way he knew best, through cards.

There is a lot of the gambler in every farmer. Farming is one of the big gambles of the business world. That is why there is a sentence on the bottom of the Schedule F that says "Do you have amounts for which you are not at risk in this farm?" Risk means "the possibility of suffering harm or loss — involving uncertain danger — expose to possible loss."

A Major Decisioin

Sometimes a farmer will buy an asset that at the time appeared to be a reasonable purchase gamble. The difference between the successful and "in trouble" farmer may be the ability to recognize when a certain asset is no longer a feasible investment.

Sometimes the cost of keeping the asset is greater than the actual return from the asset. Then the farmer must make a decision to either keep the asset at the cost of reducing family living, selling the asset to maintain family living, or finding a way to reduce operating expenses in order to both keep the asset and maintain family living.

NO ONE likes to sell an asset for a price below the price he or she paid. However, there may be no choice.

In poker, the only way to get additional cards is to throw some (discard) cards away. In real life, the only way to keep a viable business may be to sell some assets even if they have to be sold at a loss.

Income has limits

There are three basic things that must be paid from income if a family is to remain viable. The first demand on income is usually "Family Living." Many farm families have trouble calculating the actual cost of family living.

Family living includes the usual items such as food and clothes. It also includes the personal share of such dual expenses as taxes, insurance, electricity, phone, and car.

Then do not forget personal taxes, contributions, insurance premiums, and any other expenses paid from the farm account that is a personal expense.

For many families the second most important cost is "Debt Payment". No one has trouble calculating it, because the lender won't let the borrower forget.

Third is operating expenses. In many situations this is the only flexible outgo. The service or supply dealer may have to wait (unpaid bills). Or a family may become more efficient and reduce operating expenses.

Once these three costs are satisfied, the balance of income (if there is any) becomes discretionary income. That means it can be spent in any way the family desires. It could be invested in something outside of the farm, saved, spent for capital items, or wasted.

It could even be used to improve family living. That could be a danger if income dropped in a future year after the family got used to the extra income.

If income drops

When we have an economic situation such as we have now, income will drop no matter what a farmer does. More cows or more acres or more units of anything may be the worst answer.

The additional units may increase gross income, but may increase costs even more than they increase income. There may be additional debt costs or additional labor costs or additional machine replacement costs.

If these additional costs are greater than the income they generate, they will hasten the loss of the farm. That is why some farms are in trouble now.

The manager never figured the cost-return relationship. I would hasten to add that some farmers did figure this relationship at the time such additional costs were incurred. Their problem has primarily happened due to a change in the farm commodity prices.

Now these particular farmers may be faced with the most difficult decision of all: sell hard-earned or acquired assets, reduce family living drastically, change direction, or go out of business.

State meat output up

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania's January commercial red meat production, dressed weight basis, totaled 86.4 million pounds, up eight percent from January 1985, according to the Pennsylvania Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Beef slaughter, at 117.3 million pounds liveweight, was up 21 percent from January 1985. Total head slaughtered was 98,300, up 18 percent, and liveweight averaged 1,193, an increase of 31 pounds. Veal slaughter was 4.4 million pounds liveweight, three percent below last year. Calf slaughter of 25,900 head was down six percent. The average liveweight increased five pounds to 170 pounds.

Hog slaughter, at 30.6 million pounds liveweight, was down 14 percent from a year earlier. Total head slaughtered was 131,800 down 13 percent; average liveweight decreased four pounds to 232 pounds. Lamb and mutton slaughter was one million pounds liveweight, down 28 percent. The number slaughtered was 9,200, down 31 percent. However, the average liveweight increased four pounds to 110 pounds.

U.S. commercial red meat production in January totaled 3.48 billion pounds, up two percent from January 1985. Comparing January 1986 with January 1985, beef production at 2.14 billion pounds was up four percent. Cattle kill at 3.33 million head was up two percent, and average liveweight increased 20 pounds to 1,100. Veal production at 46 million pounds was up 10 percent from last year. Calf slaughter at 307,000 head was up seven percent, and average liveweight increased seven pounds to 249.

Pork production totaled 1.27 billion pounds, down one percent. Hog kill totaled 7.19 million head, declining two percent. Average liveweight increased one pound to 246 pounds. Lamb and mutton production, at 31 million pounds, was down three percent from last year. Slaughter totaled 518,000 head, down seven percent. Liveweight averaged 118 pounds, three pounds heavier than a year earlier.

W-L Alfalfas. Why grow anything but the Best?

"I plant my 900 acres with W-L Alfalfa because it gives me tonnage and quality. We've been planting WL since the early '70's, and we've had all their varieties as they've come along Right now, we're using the WL 316 heavily I like it best because it comes back quickly and stays fine When you're doing as many acres as I am, that leaf-to-stem ratio is important And we haven't had to spray for bugs, which says something about their pest resistance

Our customers want to see a good product, so I need a seed that will give me a good tonnage and high protein levels With WL, I believe I'm growing the best "

Animal health board needed?

The recent flare-up of Avian Influenza in Pennsylvania has again revealed the vulnerability of livestock and poultry producers to the potentially devastating economic effects of animal and poultry diseases.

Despite ongoing research, continued improved techniques for caring and housing, new and improved vaccines, surveillance and monitoring by producers, there are still many diseases and conditions which have no preventive vaccine or cure. Depopulation or infected and exposed herds and flocks continue to be the only positive means of disease control.

While such action almost always presents a severe financial burden on the affected producers, the resultant restrictions imposed by state or federal agencies in an effort to control the disease can have serious impact on non-affected producers as well as related industries

The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) policy recommends:

"The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (should) be funded to maintain the present levels of animal health care; establishment of an animal health commission to coordinate the overall activities of animal health, research, diagnostic and indemnity programs for Pennsylvania agriculture; and public funding for indemnity programs."

State Representatives Samuel Morris (D-Chester County), and Carmel Sirianni (R-Susquehanna County) in November, 1985, introduced the proposed Animal Health and Diagnostic Act (HB 1935). This legislation would create an independent commission known as the animal health and diagnostic commission. Members of the commission would include the secretaries of agriculture and health; House and Senate majority and minority ag committee chairmen; the dean of the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine; the dean of Pennsylvania State University's College of Agriculture; and six members representing the agriculture industry.

The commission members would elect a member chairman. It would coordinate all animal health, research and diagnostic programs. This would include all such projects and programs being conducted by the Agriculture Department, Penn State and the University of Pennsylvania.

The commission would be permitted to receive funds from the federal and state government and private sources for agricultural research and Pennsylvania agricultural promotion.

Appropriations going for animal health, animal research and diagnostic programs would go to the commission and not to other government agencies. This provision in H.B. 1935 would help to assure animal health funds would not come under the influence of political instabilities, such as administration changes.

All farmers, regardless of their commodity, should support the passage of the animal health and diagnostic act. A strong agriculture benefits both the farmer and non-farmer.

The Farmers' View is a column that is compiled by the Public Relations Division of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA). It expresses the views of PFA's policy positions on key issues as adopted by the organization's 23,313 family members.

PFU hits FmHA's credit stance

HARRISBURG Chester L. Reed, Executive Director of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union, testified on behalf of the family farm organization at a hearing held by Senator Arlen Specter on farm credit and concerns with the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA)

Reed explained that the federal government bears a three-part responsibility when dealing with the current farm crisis

First, FmHA must admit that its expansion-oriented loan officers had a hand in creating the massive agricultural debt, the outstanding balance of which is over $200 billion

"FmHA must be as eager to work with farmers in renegotiating loans as it was to make those loans in the first place," Reed said, pointing to the delinquency letters threatening foreclosure which FmHA had planned to send to every borrower $100 or more in arrears as an example of how FmHA's attitude won't help family farmers stay in business "Fortunately, FmHA has reconsidered its position and will only send threats of foreclosure to borrowers who haven't even tried to pay back their loans since the foreclosure moratorium was first announced in Coleman v Block," Reed continued

The farm leader also cited a proposed FmHA rule which would deny ownership and operating loans to farmers producing commodities which are in surplus Reed said that such a rule would push many small family farmers over the edge into bankruptcy without reaching the rule's stated goal of reducing surpluses

The second area of responsibility for the government is some kind of short-term relief to get farmers the operating capital they need for this Spring "The credit situation this year is even tighter than it was last year," Reed said

The third area of government responsibility is the need for long-term policy and a commitment to the family farm system of agriculture "The patchwork bandaid approach to farm policy that we've seen in the last few farm bills has been a series of political compromises that have done nothing to improve farm income," Reed said "This has to change"

Lehigh Valley Dairies, Inc. Employees of Atlantic will be offered employment by the new company and no jobs will be lost.

The only essential change will be at the management level of Atlantic, according to a source there. As they put it "Everyone came back to work, only some of us had different titles."

Ruth reported that although Lehigh Valley is a cooperative, no vote was needed among its members. This is due to the voting privilege given to the board of directors at Atlantic when it was formed in 1980 as a cooperative federation.

The members will be receiving a complete report on the events that enabled the sale to occur, Ruth commented. It will be discussed at the Annual Meeting of the Lehigh Valley Farmers scheduled March 12 at the Host Farm. The organization will also be holding district meetings to further explain this topic.

Ruth who was in on the negotiations when they began six months ago, said at the beginning he "had lots of apprehensions." But now he feels good about it. One of the duties of the board of directors, he explained, is to gain the best return for the producer.

Being a producer himself, he was also looking at it from that viewpoint. He went on, saying it was "passed with unanimity by the board."

One reason this merger was approved, he added, was the board's feeling that it would continue to return a good dollar to the farmers. Ruth commented that this opens a brighter market since this reputable organization brings non-farm money with which to build a good or better market.

Ruth was referring to the recent purchase of Johanna by John Labatt Ltd. of London, Ontario.

Labatt, while known primarily for its beer division, also owns Ault Dairy, the largest dairy in Canada.

According to Rosenthal, Labatt considers itself a North American food and beverage company serving only 10 percent of the continent. They were seeking to increase their share of the North American market by the purchase of Johanna and subsequently Atlantic.

All of their wholly owned companies are individually managed and continue to grow.

These recent purchases have made a significant impact on serving a larger portion of the continent. A spokesman for the Milk Marketing Board in Harrisburg reported that the two dairies may account for in "excess of 70 percent" of milk sales in the Philadelphia area.

However, Goldman contends this is not concentrating too much milk business in the hands of one company. Johanna was required to notify the Federal Trade Commission of its merger plans and was not prohibited from proceeding with the union.

The future looks prosperous for this marriage. As Ruth philosophized, "there is a time to buy and a time to sell. When this profitable offer came, it was time to sell."

extension programs, cutting out funds for 4-H, family living and community development programs.

For now Extension personnel are adopting a "wait and see" attitude Phillips said. They expect changes as the budget process continues and will wait to plan program changes until the financial picture clears.

"We're hopeful that a lot of cuts be requested will be restored," Phillips said. However, he added, if too many of the president's proposed budget cuts are restored, it could trigger automatic cuts across the board as provided for in Gramm-Rudman.

Should that happen, Extension can expect total budget cuts of about 15 percent or more, rather than 30 percent under the president's budget proposal, Phillips said.

While Reagan's budget winds its way through the legislative maze and Gramm-Rudman awaits a verdict from the Supreme Court, Extension personnel will be waiting to see just how much of their budget will fall under the Gramm-Rudman ax.

In the meantime, Phillips said, they are hoping that farmers and others served by the Extension Service will be telling their congressmen how much benefit they get from Extension programs. "We're hoping that the people we work with and serve will speak for us," he said.

Managing input costs on today's farm is more than an economic goal.

It has become an economic necessity.

Today, everything you do must be carefully evaluated for cost effectiveness and its impact upon return on investment. Now more than ever, crop management requires innovation as well as a thorough analysis of input costs versus return. It's more than prudent—it's necessary.

Specifically, what that means on farms throughout the country is an ongoing effort to increase yields and control operating expenses.

The resulting changes are dramatic and widespread. Changes in management practices that come from exploring new hybrids, new tillage practices, seeding practices, fertilizers and weed control, to name a few.

Now, more and more farmers are investigating and comparing practices on their own ground to evaluate first-hand their economic potentials. Which is why thousands of corn growers are conducting side-by-side test plot experiments comparing herbicides.

A TEST THAT GIVES YOU ANSWERS.

In side-by-side yield tests throughout the country, corn growers have seen Lasso® herbicide outperform the competition seven out of ten times. In fact, the results of on-farm tests, as well as university tests, confirm the average yield advantage of Lasso over Dual* herbicide to be in excess of four bushels of corn per acre. And the same yield advantage holds true for pre-mixed Lasso & atrazine over Bicep* herbicide.

A FORMULA FOR SUCCESS.

After conducting these tests on their own ground, growers are making their management decision in favor of Lasso out of economic necessity: an extra four bushels an acre adds about

In actual side-by-side tests Lasso outperforms the competition seven out of ten times.

So, when you figure the pluses and minuses of your next herbicide decision, there is one very important plus to keep in mind: In today's farm economy one investment returns more for your money season after season – Lasso or pre-mixed Lasso & atrazine. The herbicides that give you less stress. And more yield.

Lancaster County Dairy Day, Day 1 -

Managing the farm as a business

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

LANCASTER — Two goals that the new tax law proposals attempted to achieve are, tax simplification and creating adverse conditions for the hobby farmer. Goal number two has been accomplished, but it also adversely affects the "real" farmer.

Larry Jenkins, Farm Management Specialist, Penn State, reported these findings to the group at the annual Lancaster County Dairy Days, day one, March 4.

Presently two similar plans have been developed, one of which will be approved. These proposals come from the Reagan Administration and the House Ways and Means Committee.

Jenkins noted there are broad provisions which apply to everyone and provisions that are of greater concern to the farming community. He went on to explain that included in the broader grouping are plans to reduce the rate brackets from 14 to three or four.

There are also plans to reduce the number of exemptions and raise the deduction level a person can claim.

In the entire package Jenkins explained "There are four or five areas that I think are of particular concern to farmers." One of these areas is capital gains exclusion. This important source of savings, will be reduced from the current 60 percent exclusion level to a rate of 50 percent and will extend only to capital assets and land.

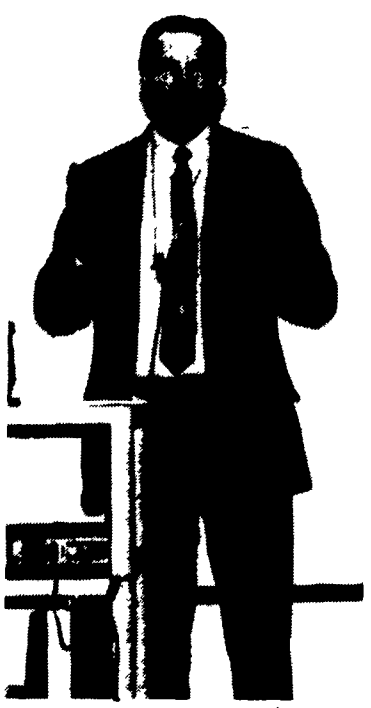
Gain from the sale of property used in the farm business will be taxed as ordinary income. These sales which will be fully taxed include the sale of cull animals.

Jenkins reported this could increase taxes, depending on the tax bracket of the individual, by as much as $1,000 yearly.

The second area of concern is the depreciation deductions. Jenkins commented that in this area both proposals will decrease the rate of deductions and make each amount smaller.

A difficult part of this requirement is that a basis would have to be calculated every year involving four calculations instead of one. Jenkins pointed out with the additional calculations it would cost more to get tax returns filed, than under the current system.

Also the proposed tax changes Jenkins explained would not allow preproductive expenses. The deductions would begin after the production period begins.



Larry Jenkins explains the new tax law proposals.

These costs will have to be accumulated and placed in a separate account. This will then be depreciated once the animal has begun producing. This will significantly increase the expense and complexity of record keeping.

Under the current proposals, Jenkins also noted that investment tax credit will be eliminated. This was done to dispel any tax shelters hobby farmers may have been using. However, "real" farmers will be adversely effected.

Jenkins reported that the general effect of this proposal will be increasing federal taxes for all types of farms.

Currently the proposal is in the Senate Financing Committee. If it becomes law it will not go into effect until January 1, 1987. It will have no bearing on tax returns for 1986.

A farm panel discussion on "How we manage our farm business," was also on the day's agenda. Included on this panel was Donald Risser, Kenneth Rutt, and Ralph McGregor.

Risser operates Meadow Vista Farm with his two brothers. They farm 375 acres near Bainbridge and raise 155 cows.

Rutt farms on 425 acres and has 105 milk cows on his Edgefield Farms. He also sells dairy related equipment in Quarryville.

McGregor, from East Berlin, of McRal Dairy Farm has 200 cows. He farms 607 acres, 300 of which are rented.

One important topic was time management. Risser reported that by always having a notepad and pencil he is able to better utilize his time. He pointed out that he is always making notes on things that need to be done or looked into. He illustrated the importance of these by stating "I'd sooner not have my pocketknife, than not have paper and pencil."

Rutt said his family maps out a schedule for each week. Goals for the week are recorded and checked off as accomplished. This also lets family members see if they are on the right path to gaining these goals.

He went on to state, "Goals are important in a business. You need to know where you want to be five or ten years and make adjustments to progress."

McGregor finds it very helpful to spend as much time as possible reading to keep abreast of current trends and broaden ones horizons to new ideas.

When asked how they felt about estate planning, all three panelists agreed a need existed on every farm for some planning of this type. Among the benefits they listed were the ability of the heir to pay any debts through a life insurance term policy, a partnership agreement which allows the remaining partners to buyout that share in case of death, and a form of protection for those who carry on.

Risser responded to the topic of how to keep a steady cash flow by explaining that they usually have something to sell, beef or crops. By having a source it provides them with an option by which he can gain cash to work discounts or other deals.

McGregor noted that while he doesn't do anything greatly different to maintain a cash flow, by having a steady cash flow he is able to purchase commodities at a good price after making phone calls to find the best prices.

An approved credit line at a local lending institution helps Rutt's cash flow. He is able to use this line to maintain a level of liquidity necessary to make purchases that will result in a discount. He is also able to maintain a cash flow through good money management and benefits from the flow of money through his equipment business.

Other speakers on the day's agenda included,H. Louis Moore, Donald Shiflet,and David Galligan, VMD.

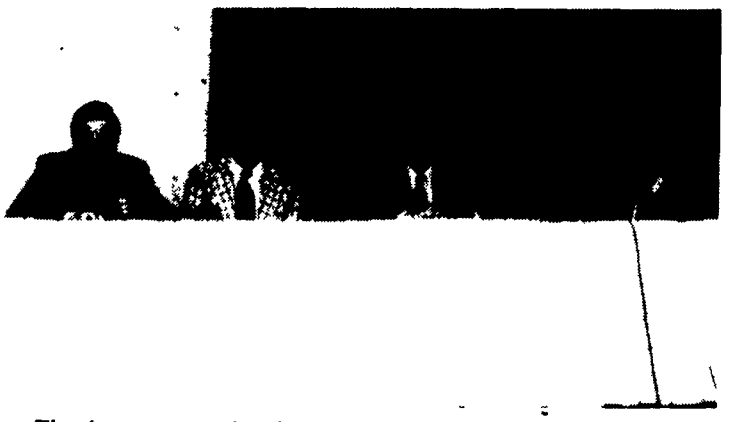
H. Louis Moore, Agricultural Economist, Penn-State, explained how the nation's economy has been growing at a steady rate in recent years while the agriculture economy has not shared in this general recovery.

Agriculture, Moore pointed, out has been producing everything in surplus. The current farm bill attempts to correct this problem as its goal is to make the U.S. more competitive in the world market.

This will be achieved through lower loan rates which have as their goals: increased exports, discouraging production increase abroad, reduce U.S. surpluses, reduce CCC costs, raise farm incomes and return the U.S. to a free market.

Donald Shifflet from the Farm Credit office in Baltimore, examined the money situation and money management. He stated that 10 percent of the nation's farmers are in a severe financial strain and they have 23 percent of the ag debt.

Shifflet noted that it is the family size commercial farm that is most effected by the current financial situation.



The farmer panel at Lancaster County Dairy Day included, left, Ralph McGregor, Donald Risser, Kenneth Rutt and Glenn Shirk, moderator.

While Farm Credit has been experiencing difficult times throughout the country, Shifflet pointed out that the Baltimore district is in good shape. This is due to the diverse nature of agriculture in this area.

Shifflet urged the audience to develop or sharpen good management practices and in general to be good businessmen.

Dr. David Galligan, VMD, New Bolton Center, explained some management considerations in feeding cows economically.

Some of the management factors he suggested the group consider were: methods of weighing feed, dry matter checks, cattle grouping, calibration of parlor feeders, and bunk space.

He then went on to explain each of these topics and suggested ways to correct a problem or implement improvements.

Consideration of the total product report, positive and negative should be considered prior to incorporating a new product, Galligan reported.

Lancaster is holding Dairy Days on two consecutive weeks to give the dairyman a better opportunity to attend both session. Day two will be held on March 11 and will focus on production, cows and crops.

Avian Flu Monitor

has led to the destruction of birds in four eastern states, the New York Department of Agriculture's Dr. Bruce Widger issued two orders to all live bird markets in New York City. First, the order requires that all markets remove birds and related debris from the premises and clean and disinfect the market weekly. This also applies to all trucks and bird hauling equipment. Second, following the discovery of H5N2 virus at a market, all birds must be destroyed and cleaning and disinfecting must be completed within 10 days,

According to USDA veterinarian, Stephen Ellis, department personnel are testing for virus twice a week at some 44 New York live bird markets. Ellis, who is one of three USDA veterinarians working in a consulting capacity in Harrisburg, hopes to be able to return home to Maine within a week.

Although officials believe that the virus has been eradicated, this is no time for poultrymen to drop their guard, cautioned Hoffman. Accordingly, intensive surveillance will continue on about 250 Pennsylvania flocks. These flocks include locations linked to any previously infected flocks by common integrators, as well as any flocks visited by trucks moving birds to the New York markets.

Flocks involved in the intensive surveillance program are being tested once to two times a week, said Ellis. This surveillance will probably continue for about four to six weeks after all infected premises have been cleaned and disinfected.

Hoffman noted that the State Department of Agriculture is currently looking at the possibility of licensing not only poultry haulers, but anyone engaged in transporting live animals. "If a trucker has a license that can be revoked, then he's likely to give more attention to the requirements needed to protect the (poultry) industry," Hoffman said.

PDA is also considering the establishment of minimum sanitary standards for the poultry industry, Hoffman said. "The federal government and the state cannot afford to continue to clean up our mess," he emphasized.

UEP recommends changes in egg marketing order

LANCASTER — According to the United Egg Producers, a majority of those testifying at recent hearings favored the proposed egg marketing order. That message was relayed to poultry producers at Poultry Progress Day by Poultry Federation executive director John Hoffman.

Over the past two months, USDA had scheduled five hearings across the country, with the last hearing held on Feb. 27. The current version of the order calls for a first-year total checkoff of one cent per dozen, with ½-cent earmarked for promotion and the same amount to go toward a surplus hen removal program. All producers would be required to participate, and no refunds would be granted.

Based on controversy surrounding the surplus removal provision, UEP has recommended that the following changes be made in the order:

- The cost of the surplus removal program should be limited to not more than $15 million.
- The surplus removal assessment should be lowered from one-half to one-quarter cent per dozen.
- The specific regulations governing surplus removal should be included in the marketing order. As the order is currently written, details of the provision would not be available until outlined by a 21-member Marketing Order Board of Directors. At the present time, however, no board has been appointed.
- Three nonproducer members should be included on the board of directors.
- After the marketing order is in place for five years, a referendum should be held to determine whether or not to continue it.
- The board should be able set policy on the basis of a 15-person quorum.
- The USDA Secretary should be required to act on all board proposals within 48 hours.

USDA is now accepting written comments from the industry until Apr. 9. At that point the Secretary of Agriculture will make his recommendation, and written comments from the industry will again be requested. Following a review of all recommendations and testimony, the Secretary will decide whether to halt the order or to hold a nationwide referendum.

A recommendation from the secretary is expected by May and a final decision should be handed down by September. If a referendum is scheduled, voting may begin in late November or early December, according to Hoffman.

Computers and corn to highlight first Pa. Corn Conference

UNIVERSITY PARK — The owner of a computerized farming operation in New York will discuss effective milk production through computerized corn feeding at the first Pennsylvania Corn Conference, scheduled for March 11 at the Keller Conference Center of The Pennsylvania State University.

James Barney, owner of Sugar Maple Farms in Sherman, NY, will address the conference's afternoon session with his presentation, "Using Corn and Computers for Efficient Milk Production."

Barney attended computer science and business management classes to turn his small dairy operation into a model of competerized efficiency. Starting with a 17-cow farm in 1965, Barney increased the operation to 280 cows producing 19,000 pounds of milk and 680 pounds of fat a year. Sugar Maple Farms also grows 250 acres of corn, 120 acres of alfalfa and 130 acres of other crops. All of Barney's crops are marketed as milk.

Computers are used at Sugar Maple Farms to store needed herd data, determine work schedules, evaluate employee performance, document operation time lines, measure spraying applications, control supply inventory and determine the most profitable crop rotations.

Barney will talk about Sugar Maple Farms during the afternoon cash grain session devoted to various methods of profiting in corn production. Conference participants may also attend the livestock afternoon session on the differences between selling grain and using corn in meat production.

The Conference's morning session will concentrate on high-efficiency production techniques and new uses for corn.

Both guest speakers and exhibitors will be featured at the conference, which is sponsored by The Pennsylvania's Master Corn Grower's Association, Allied Industries, and the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service.

For information and a registration form, contact your county agent. A $4 registration fee and preference for either afternoon session should be filed as soon as possible. Late registrations will be accepted at the door the morning of the conference, but preregistrations are preferred.

Vote for the perfect cheeseburger

WILLIAMSPORT — Consumers nationwide will be able to vote for their favorite type of cheeseburger through a special promotion being run in supermarkets this spring by the American Dairy Association. The program is being sponsored locally by the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council (ADADC).

The promotion features dairy case displays using the theme "Vote for the Perfect Cheeseburger." Display materials will include mobiles, banners and flags to attract shoppers' attention to the cheese section. The materials will present suggestions for eight different types of cheeseburgers topped with the following cheeses: Cheddar, American, Colby, Monterey Jack, Muenster, Mozzarella, Blue and Swiss.

Included with the supermarket display will be a ballot by which consumers can vote for their favorite cheeseburger. By sending in a ballot along with two proofs of purchase for domestic cheeses, they will automatically be entered in a random sweepstakes drawing. There will be 200 first place winners who will receive a complete cheeseburger party, including a grill, portable television, barbecue tools, a condiment cart, a chef's hat and apron, and expenses for cheese, ground beef and buns.

The Beef Industry Council will tie in with the promotion with displays at the meat counter. Both dairy department managers and meat department managers will be able to enter display contests by building special displays for the promotion. Displays will appear in supermarkets throughout March and April.

Locally, ADADC has signed agreements with a number of Pennsylvania supermarket chains to carry the promotion including Giant Markets, Affiliated Independents, Insalaco Markets, Economy Independents, IGA Independents, IGA Food Marts, and Riverside. The promotion will be supported by national print and broadcast advertising.

Red and White Sale and Show

CRYSTAL SPRING — The Eighth Annual Spring Red and White Show and Sale will take place on March 21 and 22, 1986.

The show is scheduled for Friday, March 21, 1986, at the Guernsey Sales Pavilion in Lancaster. This show is a preview for the sale the next day, March 22, as some of the sale animals will also be competing for the champion ribbons.

A unique feature of the sale is an Amish, Red and White Dairy Cow, quilt which will start the bidding. An estimated 90 head of these fine dairy cattle have been consigned.

The buyer will have their choice of a little of everything the breed currently offers.

One of the animals scheduled to enter the sale ring is an excellent E-D Thor daughter with a record of 21,592 M, 858 F, four percent test. Also selling will be an Enhancer calf from three Very Good 100,000 M dams. This cow family has been sired by the best — Glenafton Enhancer.

One of the beneficiaries of this sale will be the building fund for the national office. This office will be located in Breezewood, and will be the first office of a national breed association to be established in Pennsylvania.

Bedell, Daschle draft new credit bill

WASHINGTON — U.S. Reps. Berkley Bedell of Iowa and Tom Daschle of South Dakota have introduced legislation to strengthen farm income through the market and to help farmers restructure their debts.

The legislation is a combination, with some modifications, of Bedell's marketing certificate amendment that was approved last year by the House Agriculture Committee and Daschle's debt-restructing bill that was approved by Congress but vetoed by the President.

"We've just begun to fight," Bedell said. "The economic condition in our districts is continuing to deteriorate. Legislation is needed to stop the slide."

The Bedell-Daschle legislation would enable farmers to obtain higher income from the market instead of government programs. The bill helps to set the domestic price for corn and wheat by limiting domestic sales of grain to producers who choose to participate in set-asides. Farmers who did not participate would sell their grain for export at the world price which would be lower. The bill keeps the United States competitive in the world market by offering bonuses to encourage more export sales.

"Our farmers don't want to be dependent on the government for their income. They want a fair price from the market," Bedell said. "If we've learned anything under Gramm-Rudman it is that government spending on agriculture is going to be reduced. The government is no longer a reliable place to turn for income support.

"We can design farm programs to strengthen farm income through the market. That's what the Bedell-Daschle legislation does. It's far less expensive to the taxpayers to subsidize exports and give farmers a decent price up front."

The debt package, using guarantees and more flexible accounting rules, would encourage lenders to write off a portion of a farmer's debt so that he could pay back the rest and get on his feet. By helping to prevent bankruptcies, the package benefits all farmers by stabilizing land values.

"This bill is important not just for some farmers who are in trouble," Bedell said. "It's important to all farmers because it would strengthen income and stop the decline in land values. It's important to our towns and cities because it would improve the economic climate and set the Midwest back on the road to prosperity.

"It's a bill of hope for everyone who depends on agriculture, in one way or another, for their living," Bedell said.

Joining Bedell and Daschle as cosponsors are Reps. Lane Evans of Illinois, Dan Glickman of Kansas, Harold Volkmer of Missouri, Byron Dorgan of North Dakota, Tim Penny and Gerry Sikorski of Minnesota, Pat Williams of Montana, Bill Alexander of Arkansas, and Glen English, Mike Synar, Dave McCurdy, Wes Watkins and Ed Jones of Oklahoma.

The Congressmen say conditions have changed to make a new approach to farm policy more attractive. Farmers need a program that will free them from dependence on government subsidies, and the congressmen say they have a program that will spend a lot less money and do a better job of saving family farmers because it will use the market instead of the federal treasury to strengthen farm income.

Budget cuts would hurt Delaware extension

NEWARK, DE — Four major programs and over 20 Cooperative Extension Service positions in Delaware will face elimination if President Reagan's budget cuts become effective October 1, 1986. The president's executive budget would mean a 59 percent cut nationwide for the extension system, according to Richard E. Fowler, director of Delaware Cooperative Extension. He said Delaware's funding cut would actually be 64 percent because of cuts in specifically funded programs.

"All segments of extension in Delaware would be affected," he said, "but hardest hit would be pest management programs, expanded food and nutrition education (EFNEP), farm safety, 4-H, and home economics programs."

The actual funding from the federal government for the 1986 fiscal year is $1.3 million, about 50 percent of Delaware's total extension budget. The state, through the University of Delaware appropriation, provides $1.1 million, 42 percent, and county governments support local offices with $30,000.

"A reduction of this magnitude would require drastic personnel reductions," Fowler said. "We would have to adjust allocations to all programs."

Nationally, $200 million in budget cuts would mean the loss of more than 10,000 positions in U.S. counties and land-grant institutions, according to Fowler. "The president's cut would drastically alter the structure of extension as the nation knows it," he said.

Under the federal mandate that established the Cooperative Extension Service in the land-grant colleges of agriculture, funding is shared by the federal, state, and county governments. "Eliminating 64 percent of the federal commitment would erode the partnership that has made it possible for extension to thrive in the state and nation, to grow from an organization serving predominantly farmers to a system that reaches more than 200,000 Delawareans annually. Extension provides research-based knowledge to farmers, consumers, youth, and just about every segment of the population," Fowler said.

Facilities at the University of Delaware and Delaware State College enable extension staff in the three counties to deliver educational programs to all Delawareans. Approximately half of the University of Delaware's extension funds and all those of Delaware State College are provided by the federal government.

Milker school set

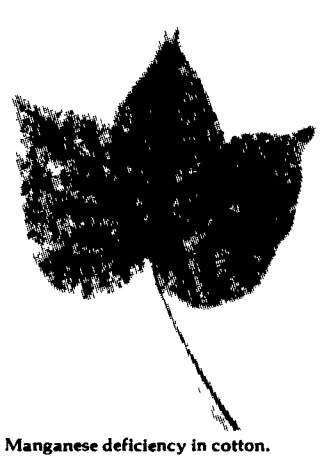
NEWARK, DE — The 1986 Delaware/Maryland milker school will be held Monday, March 17, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Pencader Grange Hall in Glasgow, Del. The event is being sponsored by the Maryland and Delaware Cooperative Extension Services, agribusiness firms and cooperatives. Pencader Grange is located on Route 896 south of the intersection with U.S. highway 40.

Two mastitis and milking machine experts will present the program — Dr. J. Woody Pankey, a dairy researcher at the University of Vermont and Dr. Robert B. Corbet, a veterinarian from El Paso, Texas, who specailizes in mastitis problems.

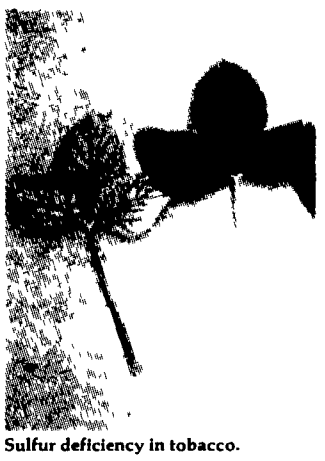
Topics to be covered during the one-day school include: a mastitis prevention and control program; hygiene in a control program; how infections occur; and mastitis therapy. There will also be time for a question and answer session.

The $5 registration fee includes lunch, which will be served by grange members. Registration starts at 9 a.m.; the program will begin at 9:30. For further information contact Dr. George F.W. Haenlein, extension dairy specialist, University of Delaware (302-451-2523).

Here's what a trace element deficiency can do to your crop



Manganese deficiency in cotton.



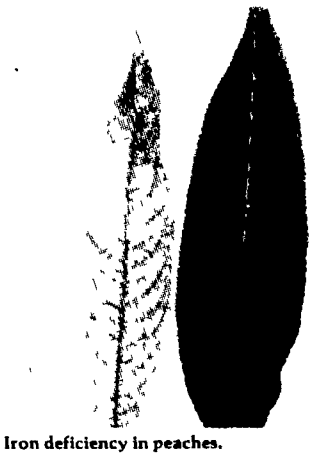
Sulfur deficiency in tobacco.

Calcium deficiency in tomatoes.

Potassium deficiency in peanuts.

Zinc deficiency in tomatoes.

Molybdenum deficiency in grapefruit.



Iron deficiency in peaches.

Copper deficiency in citrus.

Did you see any of these deficiency signs last year? If so, you know you have a problem. Make sure you don't see them this year. Have your soil and tissue analyzed. Then call your Helena man for the Tracite® formulation that will satisfy your need.

Trace elements might not seem important, but they are crucial to your yields. A minor deficiency in any one can limit your yields, even cause total crop failure. Unfortunately, by the time you see the signs, it might already be too late for this year's crops. So the time to find and treat deficiencies is right now.

TRACITE products come in many single nutrient as well as multiple nutrient combinations. They can be applied using either water or fertilizer as a carrier. Many Tracites are formulated in both liquid and dry forms. Some are also available in chelated or complexed form. Robert Smith family, a Guernsey tradition continues

BY MARTHA J. GEHRINGER

PALMYRA — When Pennsylvania Guernsey breeders visit Robert Smith's Lebanon Valley Farms, as part of their annual convention tour, they'll find a family tradition that has continued for over five decades.

The Guernseys started with Robert's father Jacob in the '30's. Originally he bought a couple of crossbreds "some of which came out black and white," said Robert. "But he wanted Guernseys, and there's been Guernseys here ever since."

Jacob started by buying reactors to brucellosis from Fairview Farms, a large Guernsey herd south of Lebanon. He was able to get these animals cheaply and built from there. All of the animals have been registered.

As these cows came fresh, their calves were placed at a different barn. By using this method, he was able to develop a clean herd. For some time he was also milking two herds at two barns to make certain the herd stayed clean.

Jacob went with Guernseys because of the premiums being paid for Golden Guernsey milk by a local dairy. In the early 70's the dairy stopped these high premiums.

The Smiths felt they could do just as well marketing their own milk, so they opened the Ja-Mar dairy store near their home.

They process all their milk and sell milk, ice cream, and cheese. These products are made from their own milk.

Many customers find their milk to be better tasting than milk they find in a regular grocery store. As David observes, "Maybe we wouldn't be in the current situation if we had kept a better milk product on the shelves."

The Smiths have never had any problems finding a market for their surplus milk. They usually sell to a local cheese plant that prices favorably for Guernsey milk. They give a fat premiums and base pricing on protein content.

There is also a creamery in Elizabethtown that will call them when they need milk.

One of the difficult aspects of a jugging operation is the assessments the government has levied. Some people think they are exempt from these assessments, however, they must report and pay the government for any milk sold through the store.

"It hurts twice as much this way," David noted. Since they must send the check to the government, they know exactly how much the government is taking. They do agree to the need for the 15 cent advertising deduction, however.

The herd has been paying its way at the milk pail. The Smiths have a couple of cows over 140,000 pounds of milk and six over 100,000 pounds of milk. Presently their rolling herd average is 14,188 pounds of milk, 692 pounds of fat, with a 4.9 test on 75 cows.

This average has been steadily increasing for the past several years. As Robert proudly points out, "A nearly 700 pound fat average proves their worth."

This average in addition to their successes on the tanbark trail has gained them national attention. The National Sale was interested in having a Lebanon Valley prefixed animal in their upcoming sale. Unfortunately, they didn't have anything this time.

Although David and his brothers had shown at the 4-H level, they only recently entered the bigger shows. David feels that now they "have something that can compete at the bigger shows."

With their recent successes in the show ring, it appears they will be continuing their winning ways. Last year they were the Premier Breeder and Exhibitor at the Maryland State Fair.

This year they tied for Premier Breeder at the Farm Show. In the 1984 Farm Show they captured both Premier Breeder and Exhibitor. They also showed the Grand Champion and the Junior Champion.

The Smiths have worked hard to get high quality cattle. They are currently using top bulls from the PTI list and the top PD milk bulls. David noted that 30 percent of the herd is bred to young sires.

They realize the importance of "getting out and sampling their young bulls to find the top future bulls." David suggested this is something all of the high protein breeds must realize and start to do more of.

Another management tool they have recently started using is the TPE program that the Guernsey Association offers. This program classifies three times in a two year period.

This allows the classifiers to see more daughters quicker and then develop better more accurate sire summaries.

One more point they can claim when marketing their animals, is that they have been certified free of Johne's disease.

While they have been doing some innovative things in marketing their animals, they have been doing some uncommon things on other phases of the farm.

They recently they began feeding roasted, ground soybeans, as part of their protein supplement. One advantage is a higher moisture harvest. This past fall was damp. The Smiths were able to harvest the beans at a moisture level of 20 percent.

Roasting reduces the moisture level to a tolerable amount. They noticed a .1 percent increase in fat as soon as they started on the soybeans.

The roasted beans are complemented with soybean meal in the protein supplement. They also feed a shelled corn and oats mixture that is combined with a ag concentrate of minerals.

Forages on the farm are fed by baled hay and silage, with the recent addition of haylage. They never put haylage up before because they were set up to handle it. This problem was resolved with the addition of a large plastic bag placed in the top of the silo.

The bag serves to limit spoilage by creating an oxygen-limiting situation in the silo. Feeding haylage this year helped to reduce feed costs by supplying more homegrown protein. As David joked, "And we were tired of baling hay."

Rations are determined for each cow and adjusted grain amounts are adjusted after each month's DHIA report returns. That is one of the advantages David has found with the stanchion barn, individual feeding.

The replacement animals at Lebanon Valley Farms are raised on at different barn. The heifers are placed in four group pens which are based on age. The calves are placed in individual pens that David built.

All the feed on the farm is also grown on the 180-acre farm. This past year they rented an additional 80 acres.

They decided to rent land to reduce equipment costs and possibly raise some cash crops, or at least become self-sufficient feed producers.

With all the other distractions, they felt they weren't doing a sufficient job of keeping up to date on the latest in crop production. To get help in this area they have joined the newly formed Crop Management Association.

The Smiths have ambitious plans for the future . . . including higher production, higher quality animals and a more efficient operation.

It's a Guernsey tradition in the Smith family. And a winning tradition at that.

Lebanon Valley Farms is located southeast of Palmyra.

USDA announces cuts for Gramm-Rudman

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture soon will begin spending reductions in its commodity programs to comply with President Reagan's Feb 1 sequester order issued under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act)

The order calls for the USDA spending reduction of $1.3 billion for fiscal 1986, equal to a 4.3 percent reduction in those USDA outlays subject to provisions of the Act. The reductions, scheduled to begin March 1, will be allocated equally on a pro-rated basis among these programs.

USDA programs exempted from spending reductions include the Food Stamp, the Child Nutrition, and the Women, Infants and Children Special Supplemental Food Programs.

Officials said $823 million in resductions will be made in 1986 Commodity Credit Corporation programs. No reductions will be made in price support loans, purchase agreements and regular deficiency payments made for 1985 crops.

Target prices and loan and purchase rates will not change for 1986 crops. Also, payments made in-kind or by negotiable commodity certificates will not be subject to reduction.

Reductions of 4.3 percent will apply, however, to checks paid to producers for commodity loans, deficiency and diversion payments for 1986 crops, and to payments for certificates that producers redeem for cash.

Both advance and final payments will be subject to the reduction. The reductions will be made after the maximum payment limitation of $50,000 per producer has been applied.

Producers entering 1986-crop programs will be notified at the time of sign-up how programs will be affected by the deficit reduction legislation.

In regard to dairy programs provisions, officials said the price support level of $11.60 per hundredweight will remain unchanged for the current fiscal year, but CCC purchase prices for cheese, butter, and nonfat dry milk will be discounted by 4.3 percent from March 1 through Sept. 30. USDA previously announced that payments made to producers based on bids received under the 18-month dairy termination program will not be reduced.

In regard to wool and mohair payments, officials said payments will not be subject to the 4.3 percent reduction. However, the support price for these commodities will not be increased. Payments under the National Wool Act due on or after April 1 will be based on the frozen support price for shorn wool.

In regard to provisions of the conservation reserve program, officials said the amount of acreage entering into the reserve and the level of annual rental payment based on bids received will not be reduced.

York farms honored for Farm-City Week participation

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — Four York County farms and four local businessmen were honored during the annual York Ag-Business seminar, February 27, at the York Fairgrounds banquet center.

Recognition went to those farms and business representatives who participated in the 1985 Farm-City exchange, held on National Ag Day, March 20. Businessmen spent the day with their farm hosts, then hosted their farm exchangees to their business at a later date.

Participants were Paul and Gail McPherson, Maple Lawn Farms, who hosted Bill Groft of the York Bank and Trust Company; Martin Grey, Sinking Springs Farms who exchanged visits with Gregrory Keller of the Drovers and Mechanics Bank; Jerry and Carolyn Rutter of Rutter's Livestock and their exchangee Walter Jeffers, Agribusiness Insurance Center; and Robert L. Smyser, Smyser's Richlawn Farms and James Vallosio of the General Telephone Company of Pennsylvania.

"Agriculture and Its Environment" was the theme of the 23rd ag-business session, which drew about one hundred representatives from the business and agriculture communities.

Speakers included state Director of Environmental Resources Paul Swartz and Penn State specialists Dr. Les Lanyon, Dr. John Skelly and Dr. Karen Mancl.

After spending $26 million for a five-year study and report on the Chesapeake, the Environmental Protection Agency will now shell out a couple of million more for a model to show how the Bay works, says DER director Swartz.

"More with less" is the message of Bay funding, especially in the area of nutrient management. Two of the largest problems of the estuary are nitrogen and manure pollution, with manure management and central focus of spending in Pennsylvania.

Swartz says that farmers in the 27,000-square-mile Bay watershed basin area are applying annually an extra $90 in nutrients to their farmland, or the equivalent of $2200 per farm.

Increasing concentrations of animal numbers on decreasing amounts of land is the concern of soils specialist Dr. Les Lanyon. Dr. Lanyon related statistics showing over half the animal manure in Pennsylvania is produced in the Southeastern corner of the state, with up to 27 tons applied per acre to some Lancaster County land.

Since 72 percent of the state's ag income is directly derived from livestock or poultry commodities, Lanyon is working with DER funded measuring equipment to monitor volumes of manure applied per acre. Use of this technology can help farmers pinpoint actual tonnages of nutrients applied to cropland. The aim is to drastically slice the contribution from the Susquehanna basin of 70 percent of the nitrogen and 56 percent of phosophorus levels that are creating problems in the Bay's marine environment.

Pollution expert Dr. John Skelly looks up instead of down in the environment, claiming a Chicken Little, or "the sky is falling" complex.

What's actually falling, warns Skelly, is acid rain, a direct result of short-sighted theories that "the solution to pollution is dilution." To direct coal-fired factory and power plant emissions away from the ground, builders constructed towering stacks to carry pollutants into upper air levels. But emissions at that level combine with moisture to form acid rain, sometimes with a pH level nearly that of vinegar. Industrial and vehicular emissions also create ozone, one of the most critical pollutants to plants.

Both acid rain and high ozone levels are economically affecting crops, especially sensitive ones such as grapes and white pine. While varieties are being developed to resist such pollutants, Skelly questions the value of genetic pollution resistance.

"It'll just result in more air pollution," he figures, projecting that scientists and environmentalists are neglecting the need to protect our long-term food supplies from the effects of filthy air. Automobile exhaust controls, better engineering at pollution sources, plant breeding, protective plant sprays and legislation are all components of long-term solution to pollution.

Clean water — or lack of it — concerns water quality specialist Dr. Karen Mancl. High nitrate levels, which are prominent in numerous rural well water supplies, pose the greatest danger to

Grubb sees state role in marketing, health issues

YORK — State Ag Secretary Richard Grubb slipped away from budget hearings in Harrisburg temporarily February 27, to address the York Ag-Business seminar.

"This is a pleasant interlude in the budget hearings," quipped the Secretary, special guest speaker for the annual Chamber of Commerce farmer-businessmen confab.

Speaking to the present general depressed farm situation, Grubb noted an optimism of Pennsylvania farmers, saying he hears the philosophy of "we've been there before — we'll gut it out."

He cited a fairly stable ag economic situation in Pennsylvania, checking off such reasons as diversity of commodities, favorable soil and climactic conditions, proximity to large population centers, and overall lower debt loads than in other regions of the country.

Grubb sees two specific areas where the state must play a partner in boosting agriculture: marketing and animal health.

Toward the first goal, he anticipated a state budget of $300,000 to work with the Commerce Department in promoting overseas development of markets for Pennsylvania food products. "Value added" items, especially beef, pork, vegetables and fruits, have proven popular in export orders.

In more localized marketing efforts, the state is helping fund some 60 retail and tailgate outlets, enabling producers to sell their products direct to consumers.

In dealing with improved livestock and poultry health, Grubb sees the Commonwealth's present laws more a bust than a boon.

"We have fifty-year-old, archaic, laws for animal health problems," he lamented, calling for a complete review of the state's capabilities for dealing with livestock health emergencies and on-going concerns.

Secretary of Agriculture Grubb says Pennsylvania farmers are optimistic about tough times and plan to "gut it out" until the economy picks up.

babies. Infants are especially prone to nitrate problems, since their bodies more readily convert nitrates to nitrites, which interfere with the oxygen level in the body. Blue Baby Disease is a direct result of infant nitrate contamination. Bottled water should be used for infant feeding and formula needs where water sources are high in nitrates.

A last-minute speaker change put Charles Strehl, York City director of environmental services on the program. Strehl recounted the city's efforts to handle sewage sludge and recycle it through safe farmland application.

"Sludge is the by-product of clean water," Strehl explained, and must be biologically treated to destroy any disease-causing pathogens, before land application.

York city and surrounding municipalities generate between 200 to 300 tons of liquid sewage daily, or 15 tons of dry solids. Land application was the accepted method until the late 1970's, when reluctance by farmers to use the material in summer, and tighter DER regulations, compounded with other factors to convince city planners to construct a sludge incinerator. That brought other eventual problems, including escalating fuel costs and ash disposal.

Newer technologies, including improved water removal techniques, have since reduced quantities of sludge and hazards of its use, making the product again feasible for use on area farmland.

PFA pushes budget, trade, tax stands in D.C. 'tour'

WASHINGTON – The president of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) has urged Congress to protect the economic future of agriculture when considering the major issues of tax reform, international trade and deficit reduction.

PFA president Keith Eckel of Clarks Summit, Lackawanna County made the point during a breakfast address to farmers and congressmen attending PFA's national legislative tour. Over 200 PFA members traveled to Washington, D.C. March 5-6 to meet with their congressmen on important farm issues.

PFA is a voluntary, general farm organization representing over 23,000 farm families. It is affiliated with the nation's largest farm organization, the 3.3-million member American Farm Bureau Federation.

Addressing the issue of tax reform, Eckel said, "PFA and the American Farm Bureau Federation support the need for tax reform. However, we oppose measures that would impose a greater tax burden on production agriculture than it already is carrying."

Saying that tax reform legislation could greatly improve the efficiency and growth of our nation's economy, Eckel noted that, "At the present time we have seen excessive investment in agriculture at a disadvantage to fulltime farmers."

On the issue of international trade, Eckel said PFA and American Farm Bureau oppose protectionist legislation, either by the U.S. or foreign countries. "I would urge you as Congressmen to tell our trade representatives to be tough. Argue fiercely for fair treatment of U.S. agricultural products by foreign countries," Eckel told the congressmen.

"The United States can be competitive if it is farmer competing with farmer. But, the American farmer is at a great disadvantage . . . in a losing situation . . . when he must compete with the treasury of a foreign government," Eckel said.

Addressing the budget cuts resulting from the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction laws, Eckel said, "At first glimpse it looks like agriculture is going to pay a much higher price than others to meet the goals of Gramm-Rudman . . . The goals are commendable, but some of the players on this budget cutting team get to play first string without even trying out for the team, mainly the major domestic entitlement programs." Eckel pointed out that Social Security, veterans' compensation and pensions and other entitlement programs will not be cut by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law.

PFA is urging Congress to amend the deficit reduction law to repeal the exemption from budget cuts for entitlement programs. PFA also supports a three-year freeze in the cost-of-living adjustments for entitlement programs. "Farmers have long supported a reduction in federal spending . . . but it must be a fair share of across-the-board cuts," Eckel said.

When Congress considers budget cuts in the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Eckel told lawmakers, "We would encourage you to make spending cuts which will have the least impact on production agriculture."

USDA pressured on spring loans

WASHINGTON — Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., Chairman of a House Agriculture subcommittee which oversees farm credit programs, has called on the Agriculture Department to move swiftly to allocate Farmers Home Administration loan funds to meet current spring planting needs.

"It is my understanding that second quarter (January-March) allocations for direct farm operating funds are exhausted or near depletion in more than 10 states already...the need for action in this matter is obvious and critical," Jones warned in a letter to Acting Secretary of Agriculture Frank Naylor, Jr.

"Therefore I urge that sufficient amounts of the funds previously set aside for the third and fourth quarters be immediately released and made available in states where needed to continue processing applications for direct farm operating loans," Jones added.

The Farmers Home Administration, an Agriculture Department agency, functions as a lender of last resort for farmers who cannot qualify for credit from other sources. The agency makes short and intermediate direct loans for farm operating needs and longer term real estate loans. It also provides guarantees for operating and real estate loans made by private lenders. The allocations Jones requested are in the direct lending program for farm operating needs.

"Any shutdown in these loans, even a temporary one because a state has exhausted its quarterly allocation, could be very damaging to farmers who are trying to make spring planting plans in one of the toughest economic years any of us have seen for many producers. I hope the administration will respond to my request – and quickly," Jones added in a separate statement.

The subcommittee Chairman's letter continued, "With the entire month of March yet to go before the (next quarterly) allocations are made, it is inevitable that many more states will join the list of those unable to process applications for direct operating loans at exactly the time when farmers' planting season credit needs are approaching the peak."

Jones pointed out also that in passing the 1985 farm bill, Congress gave the Agriculture Department authority to transfer up to 25 percent of funds authorized for guaranteed loans into the direct loan account. That authority should be used promptly to help avoid any cases in which farmers find they cannot get FmHA direct credit at the time it is needed for spring bills.

"Based on recent FmHA loan activity reports which indicate only about 13 percent of the...guaranteed farm operating loan fund has been obligated so far, it seems unlikely that a 25 percent transfer to the direct loan category would result in any disruption or shortfall in the guaranteed loan program," Jones told Naylor.

Expert tells Berks dairymen:

'Winners will be those who make fewest mistakes'

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondents

LEESPORT — Dairy Day in Berks County attracted a large audience to the Berks County Agricultural Center on February 25th, as farmers focused their attention on continuing education.

In addition to updates on the 1986 Farm Bill, the Wheat and Grain Reserve, the Conservation Reserve, and the Dairy Herd Buyout program, dairymen also reviewed dairy trends of the past, present, and future, and discussed increasing the genetic progress of a dairy herd.

Featured speakers for the day were Joe Hlubik, Penn State Extension dairy scientist, and Larry Specht, Penn State Extension dairy scientist. Costs of production, water quality, and a panel discussion of breeding program goals rounded out the meeting.

Regarding current dairy industry trends, Hlubik stated, "more emphasis is being placed on where the lowest cost milk is produced." He went on to say that farms are gradually increasing in size; production per cow per year is increasing; and dramatic increases are expected by 1988 due to biotechnology. Hlubik listed several industry advances currently under research.

Receiving much interest, according to Hlubik, are somatotropins, or growth hormones. Researched throughout the 1950's to 80's, they have been shown to promote growth in young animals and to increase milk production in lactating animals.

With the help of biotechnology, stated Hlubik, these very expensive hormones could be produced cheap enough to be made available to farmers. Although seemingly optimistic about current research, Hlubik cautioned dairymen about the new advances with "questions must be answered," regarding the impact on the market, residues in milk, and herd health.

Other areas being researched are protein regulation, NPN intake, amino acid balance, carbohydrate regulation, and isoacids. Hlubik explained each item to dairymen and discussed future possibilities of use on the dairy herds.

He concluded, "the important thing is to prioritize where we need to focus our attention now." "Quality control in regards to feeds is very important," he stated referring to the previously mentioned advances in technology currently under research.

The trends point to improved management, Hlubik continued. More computerization, quicker problem solving, the use of consultants, sharper business practices, and better disease controls will be a "must" in the future, according to Hlubik.

Genetic progress in dairy herds was discussed by Larry Specht, Penn State dairy scientist. "The team that's going to win this game is the team that makes the fewest mistakes." Specht coined a phrase to refer to the dairy business. He listed several genetic mistakes to avoid in a dairy herd.

The dairy scientist began by explaining the importance of proper identification of each animal. "This is very, very critical," he stated. Animals need to be identified for bull studs to use in their sire evaluations and also to evaluate their future potential in your herd.

He also cautioned dairymen not to "plunge on hot shot bulls." "Avoid rushing to use hot new bulls with only a few daughters," he repeated. Look at the pedigree indication to begin, Specht advised. "See if it is reasonable to expect that this bull is going to have that summary," he explained.

Specht also advised dairymen to determine if the new bull was randomly mated; has a sufficient numbers of daughters in a wide number of herds; and a realistic proof in regards to his pedigree. "I am a very strong advocate of the young sire progeny test programs," he concluded.

Specht advised breeders to use better bulls and improve the genetic base in their herds. According to Specht, the average PD of sires in a herd is improving in Pennsylvania and should be improving in each individual herd. "If you are looking to get the best possible breeding for the lowest amount of dollars, use the young sire breeding program," Specht advised dairymen. "The young bull crop of today is a better crop of bulls," he concluded.

In ending his discussion, Specht also cautioned breeders to "beware of the Canadian proofs." Canadian data uses breed class averages. The formulas to use to convert Canadian data to United States terms were given by Specht as follows:

To estimate the PD -Milk = BCA (breed class average) for milk multiplied by 117 and then subtract 727.

To estimate the PD -Fat = BCA (fat) x 4.32) - 17.

A BCA should be in the range of +14 to +20 to be competitive.

A panel discussion with Clyde Plushanski, Kutztown, and Nelson Troutman, Richland, concerning breeding goals in their herds, continued in the afternoon. Clyde Myers, Berks County agent also discussed the recent well water survey and water quality. Throughout the day dairymen could ask questions and visit the many exhibits to complete the 1986 Dairy Day educational program.

NE Maple Producers meet

PLEASANT VALLEY — The Northeastern Pennsylvania Maple Producer's Association held its Annual Meeting and Dinner recently at the Pleasant Valley Grange Hall, with over 80 maple producers and friends in attendance.

Edward Curtis, President of the Northeastern Pennsylvania Maple Producer's Association, conducted a short business meeting and also reported on the recent Pennsylvania Farm Show maple activities and the North American Maple Syrup Council Annual Meeting which was held at Wellsboro, Pa.

Featured speakers were Lloyd Sipple, publisher and editor of "The Maple Syrup Digest", Bainbridge, New York and Bob Lamb, Lamb Naturalflow, Inc., Bernhards Bay, New York, manufacturer of plastic tubing and plastic fittings for the maple syrup industry.

Lloyd shared with the producers some of the techniques he has used to produce top-quality maple syrup products, especially maple cream. He also described how plastic tubing was introduced as a means of transporting maple sap to a collecting barrel or a holding tank. He and Bob Lamb displayed some of the different types of fittings and tubing manufactured for maple syrup production.

The group reelected Spencer Callender, Thompson to the board of directors, and chose Quentin Mead, Moscow to replace Floyd Thomas, also of Moscow, whose term had expired.

Ed Curtis presented plaque awards to Bob Lamb and Lloyd Sipple for their many years of work and support on behalf of the maple industry here in Northeastern Pennsylvania.

Guernsey Club offers complete sales service

The American Guernsey Cattle Club (AGCC) has established a Guernsey marketing service to help dairymen easily purchase and merchandise high- solids-producing Guernseys. Guernsey Marketing Service (GMS) handles private-treaty sales as well as consignment and dispersal sales. Offering a full range of services, GMS will be available to assist with sale selection work as well as the complete management of sales.

Erick Metzger of Columbus, Ohio has been named the GMS coordinator. A member of the AGCC staff since January 1983, he has worked with the AGCC-sponsored young sire-proving groups, type traits appraisal coordination and registration activities. He grew up on a Guernsey farm in Indiana and graduated from Purdue University in the dairy science program.

Ron Sersland has joined the staff as a marketing specialist. A December 1985 graduate of Iowa State University with a degree in dairy science, Sersland has had prior work experience with International Sales and Service based in Lake Mills, Wisconsin. He was raised on a dairy farm in northeast Iowa.

When discussing the creation of this new AGCC program, Metzger says, "there is a great demand for high-solids-producing cattle. The breeds of cattle who are looking for milk with a high-solids content. Whether registered or grade, Guernseys can meet such needs for high-solids milk.

J. F. Cavanaugh, secretary-treasurer of the AGCC, also expresses strong optimism about this new program. "It is one that has been needed for a long time. Now that it is readily available, I hope that dairymen will take advantage of the profit-making opportunities it can provide."

Metzger expresses hope that GMS should be able to move as much as $1 million of Guernseys this year. "It all comes back to a basic need that the AGCC should meet," says Metzger. "Dairymen invest in registration papers, official testing, type traits appraisals and other programs in order to improve their initial investment . . . the Guernsey cow. To achieve the best possible return on that investment, the dairyman has to merchandise some of his good cattle. That is what the AGCC intends to do through its new Guernsey Marketing Service."

For more information on GMS and other AGCC services, contact the AGCC at P.O. Box 27410, 2105-J South Hamilton Road, Columbus, Ohio 43227, telephone (614) 864-2409.

FmHA backs interest 'buy-down'

HARRISBURG — Agriculture lenders can join with the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) in a three-year interest "buy-down" program to help farmers having trouble repaying their loans or obtaining new ones, FmHA State Director Elmer Hawbaker, said today.

Under the new program, lenders may make or refinance FmHA guaranteed loans to eligible farmers at reduced interest rates. FmHA will match a lender's reduction of interest rates up to 2 percent. If a lender reduces an interest rate 2 percent, FmHA can match that, providing a 4 percent interest rate reduction for the farmer.

FmHA can guarantee up to 90 percent of another lender's loan. If the borrower should default, the Federal agency would pay up to 90 percent of the loss to the lender.

"We hope agriculture lenders in Pennsyvlania will make use of this program," said Hawbaker. "By making Federally guaranteed loans at reduced rates to qualified farmers, lenders will strengthen their agriculture loan protfolio, reduce their chances of loss, and increase the availability of affordable credit to family farmers."

To qualify for a loan under the new 3-year, $490 million program, a borrower must be unable to get a loan elsewhere at reasonable rates and terms; must be unable to make loan payments unless the interest rate is reduced; and must show enough projected income to make the reduced-rate loan payments.

The FmHA regulations, which spell out the details of the "buy-down" program, are expected to be published in the Federal Register this week.

Additional information is available by contacting the FmHA State Office at Room 728, Federal Building, P.O. Box 905, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania 17108. The telephone number is 717-782-4466.

USDA proposes guidelines for pork, beef promotion boards

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Department of Agriculture has issued a proposed rule establishing procedures for the nomination and election of board members to administer the beef and pork promotion and research orders.

Paul Fuller, a marketing official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the Beef and Pork Promotion, Research, and Consumer Information Acts of 1985 authorized the establishment of research, promotion and consumer information programs to strengthen the position of these two commodities in the marketplace. The pork program will be funded by a mandatory assessment of up to ¼ of 1 percent of the market value at the time of sale on all hogs sold in the United States, including an equivalent amount on imported hogs and pork.

"The National Pork Producers Delegate Body, consisting of approximately 165 pork producers including some importers, will be responsible for administering all aspects of the order," said Fuller. "The secretary of agriculture will appoint delegate members from pork producers selected in statewide elections, while importers will be nominated by eligible importer organizations for appointment by the secretary."

Under procedures outlined in the proposed rule, state pork producer associations and individual pork producers may nominate candidates for statewide election. The names of candidates in each state receiving the highest number of votes will be submitted for consideration as appointees to the National Pork Producers Delegate Body.

The beef program will be funded by a mandatory $1-per-head assessment on all cattle marketed in the United States, including an equivalent amount on imported cattle and beef.

"The Cattlemen's Beef Promotion and Research Board will consist of approximately 112 cattle producers and importers nominated by industry for appointment by the secretary of agriculture," said Fuller. "The board will be responsible for administering all aspects of the order."

Under procedures outlined in the proposed rule, state cattle producer associations, state farm organizations, and importer organizations would apply to USDA for certification to nominate members for appointment to the board.

Cattle producers, beef industry officials and other interested persons have until March 10 to submit comments.

Notice of the proposed rule was published recently in the Federal Register. Comments may be submitted in duplicate to the Marketing Programs and Procurement Branch, Livestock and Seed Division, AMS, USDA, Room 2610-S, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Tractor pullers sponsor Toy Show and Auction in Carlisle

BY MONTIE TAK
Special Correspondent

NEWVILLE – Sleek and shining, the tractors stood in rows. rows.

John Deeres, Whites, New Hollands and Olivers by the hundreds. New tractors, old tractors and some vintage makes long forgotten. A veritable army of farming equipment.

But don't try to do the spring plowing with them. These tractors are all miniatures.

"The problem is nowadays a lot of farming is big business," says Harry Barrick. "With the economics of it, farming is hard to get into but people have farming in their blood."

"So now they're farming the kitchen table instead of in the fields."

Barrick should know. He is vice president of the Cumberland Valley Tractor Pullers Association. He and his wife Revena run a dairy operation at their R.D. #4, Newville farm. And they have a collection of toy tractors numbering in the hudreds.

They and their neighbor and fellow toy tractor collector Brandon Weary have been instrumental in organizing the First Annual Toy Tractor Show and Auction, to be held Saturday, March 15 at the Holiday Inn in Carlisle. The show will run from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. with the auction scheduled to begin at 7:00 p.m., auctioneer Mark K. Keller presiding. The organizers also plan an in-room toy swap for Friday evening, for both vendors and the public.

"This is something for the community to come and see," says Brandon. "Especially since this is a farming area."

The show and sale are sponsored by the Cumberland Valley Tractor Pullers Association. "Harry has wanted to do a show for about two years," recalls Revenna. "This is something that really interested us and the Tractor Pullers are using it as a fundraiser."

Harry had first introduced the idea to the other Association members at the annual banquet January 4. He says interest was strong by the February meeting but adds, "Their interest is really going to come at the auction, as they see the miniatures of their favorite tractors."

Response to the sale has been excellent. Brandon says vendors will be traveling to Carlisle from Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and other areas of Pennsylvania. One Iowa vendor contacted him about the possiblity of shipping in some of his models for the auction. Sale tables are sold out but anyone can consign toy tractors to the auction.

"We didn't really get serious about collecting until two years ago," says Revenna. "We collected Olivers previously because we liked big Olivers." Their collection of several hundred tractors includes over 100 miniature Olivers.

Two years ago they started to go

Brandon Weary, one of the show organizers, admires a Sheppard diesel model, one of only 1,500 made.

A fleet of toy tractors stands ready to roll. And that's just a part of the Oliver tractor collection at the home of Harry and Revenna Barrick, Newville RD 4.

DEALER INQUIRIES INVITED

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

Asked how she is able to hold up under a multitude of troubles which always seemed to plague her, a wise old woman replied, "When trouble gets too heavy, I meditate." Pressed for more explanation, she replied, "O'course, when I meditate, I usually fall asleep! Then when I wake up it's time to milk the cow."

March is nearly half over, and our time for meditation and contemplation is getting mightly short. So let's set right down and get on with it, because it will soon be time to wake up and face sprinig head on.

Each winter month has it's special moods. December is the time to look forward to a quiet, restful winter, especially if the barn and silos are full, and the cows are fall-fresh and rarin' to milk. With no hay to make, no corn to harvest, no land to plow or prepare, and no planting to get done yesterday, December sort of eases us past Christmas and into the real wintery New Year. But we're usually too full of Fall's energy and Winter's anticipation to do much meditating.

January and February can be quiet months, keeping the barn comfortable, everybody fed and bred, and watching the calves enjoy the fresh air while we hurry to get back into the warm kitchen. It's meeting time, when we can overeat on banquet fare, get fat on chicken, ham, and potato filling. (Anything learned is incidental to the feast!) I'm only kidding. Our minds also had a feast, if we didn't meditate too much and fall asleep.

Once past January, February flies so fast that March appears before we're ready for it. But once here, the time for meditation behind the kitchen stove is short and precious. If you only have time for a quick one before milking time, here are a few suggestions that you can work on.

Encourage the kids. Help your 4-H'er to keep the record books up to snuff. That heifer is doing great, and ought to show well at the Fair. But record books never were high in Junior's priority. So show them how it's done.

Check the seed catalogs, if Ma hasn't already sent in her order. At least make a show of interest in it, knowing full well that it's her garden after you spread the manure and plow it up next month.

Read Brockett's Farm Management Column. Sure, it's more fun to read the comics and cartoons in the paper, but your brain needs some real meat along with the sweet stuff, just the same as your stomach does. The people who read good solid stuff are the winners in life's tough battles.

Be a volunteer leader. The Grange, Farmers Association, 4-H clubs, your Church, and the School District, all need good, sound thinkers and leaders. If you don't feel up to leading, at least volunteer your service as a supporter with a free will or a strong back.

Attempt something new. How about a short course in Mechanics, or Economics, or Computers? You're never too old to learn, and it could slip you right out of a muddy rut. Might even try to play a tune on the old piano.

Ever visit the Library? Once you get started, it's a habit that's hard to stop, and one of the most rewarding uses of extra time.

Or how about packing up the spouse and the kids and taking them out for lunch? You'd like Sizzlin' Steaks, or Ponderos pines, and the kids would love Mc'Chickenburgers and Dairy Queen shakes.

If none of the above turn you on, try some plain old fashioned meditation. Of subjects on which to meditate there is no end. The meaning of Easter. How to make the work load easier come spring. Clean up the trashy feed entry (mentally first, then get the hired man to work on it). Tell the kids they are the best. Give the hired hand a pat on the back. Hug the head of the household. Dream of far away places. Put an extra buck on the collection plate for the hungry.

Give thanks for surviving the winter, and pray for an early spring.

Guernsey breeders finalize Annual Meeting and Sale

LEBANON — Guernsey breeders from across Pennsylvania will convene in Lebanon for their 55th Annual Meeting.

This year's meeting starts with an informative presentation by John R. Moulton, Director of Operations - FMBA Service at PA Farmers Association. He will discuss "Can the Guernsey breed survive present dairy economics?"

In his speech he will look back at why things happened in the last 19 years. He will then proceed to suggest ways the Guernsey breeder can survive coming years through changes in management and marketing.

This promises to be an upbeat enthusiastic start to the annual meeting. It will be followed by several meetings and the Annual Awards Banquet. This banquet features production awards, open and junior All-PA awards, PA Queen Contest and an auction of Guernsey novelty items. Dieter Krieg will be the featured speaker.

Day two begins with a farm tour to Lebanon Valley Farms, Annville where the Robert B. Smith family has developed a distinguished herd of Guernseys.

The eighth annual Blue Halter Calf Sale and Annual Meeting Bred Heifer Sale conclude the meeting Saturday afternoon. This sale will be held at the Lebanon County Fairgrounds at 1:30 p.m.

This sale features 35 calves and bred heifers catalogued from such high PD bulls as Big Tex and Fayette. These animals come to this sale from across the state.

The calves which will be sold have both type and a pedigree that spells milk. Several of the dams of these calves have records of 20,000 pounds of milk.

The bred heifers entered in the sale also have excellent pedigrees and are described as animals the buyers can take home and make money with.

Ruth Ann Johns, Assistant Business Manager for the Pennsylvania Guernsey Association is encouraged by the results of other recent Guernsey Sale. She feels this sale offers buyers animals that will be a sound financial investment.

All interested buyers are encouraged to attend both sales and youths interested in a Guernsey calf as a project, should remember the 10 percent discount they will receive on any animals purchased for a youth project.

ADADC launches Hispanic campaign

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

SYRACUSE – "Milk. America's Health Kick" may be "La Moda de Hoy es Leche Fresca."

But the message in the new advertising campaign being launched by the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. is still the same: drink milk.

The ADADC's new program, unveiled at the organization's recent annual meeting here, is directed specifically at New York City's Hispanic population, the most important Spanish-speaking market in the country, and one of the largest in the world.

The "Anglo," or English-speaking population may doubt the need for or the effectiveness of a campaign oriented to Hispanics.

But a series of ads directed at the Spanish-speaking population can be justified as a good business decision, according to Marcelo Salup, director of strategic planning at DMB&B/Latinoamericana, a subsidiary of the ADADC's ad agency, Darcy, Masius, Benton & Bowles.

With 20 percent of New York's population, the Hispanic population is a "huge, sub-sub market," that is easy to reach and is a good prospect for increasing milk sales.

The market is "easily segmentable" because of the language differences, Salup noted. According to surveys, 64 percent of New York Hispanics use Spanish in their homes, and only 44 percent rate their proficiency with English as good or very good.

The language barrier, Salup added, actually creates an opportunity to target the market quickly and efficiently. In New York City alone, there are six Hispanic radio stations, two television stations and eight newspapers, all of which cater to this large group.

Hispanics spend about 25 percent of their disposable income on food, and their families are larger and more likely to have young children. Fully 70 percent of the Hispanic population, he said, is under 35, compared to about 50 percent of the general population.

And studies clearly show that Hispanics are already heavy users of whole milk.

Furthermore, the advertising industry has discovered that Hispanics appreciate a campaign that is tailored to their eyes and ears, with complete translations and Spanish-looking people.

That information has made specially designed Hispanic campaigns the fastest-growing segment of the advertising industry, in fact.

In order to reach this market, the ad firm has developed a television commercial that translates the ADADC's "Health Kick" positioning into Spanish.

To create continuity and make the best use of existing footage, the agency used the same visuals as the "Anglo" commercials, using a variety of views, but only a few closeups of people who were clearly not Hispanics.

A new version of the musical theme was recorded, with a definite Latin beat and translation of the lyrics into Spanish. The message remained essentially the same, however, in order to create maximum transference among Hispanics who see the campaign in both English and Spanish.

Preliminary testing indicates the campaign should do well among New York's Spanish population, the ADADC says. The campaign, which began last month, will be tested in greater depth in coming months.

January milk production increases eight percent

WASHINGTON – U. S. milk production in January surpassed year-earlier levels for the 11th consecutive month, as officials began to express concern about the size of the seasonal increases that will begin in just a few months.

The nation's milk output in January was 12.18 billion pounds, an increase of 611 million pounds over December's total and 885 million pounds, or eight percent, more than the January 1985 total.

Cow numbers in January climbed about 3.5 percent over 1984 levels, to 11.16 million, while production per cow was up 4.5 percent to 1,091 pounds.

In Pennsylvania, production was up 10 percent to 856 million pounds. Cow numbers averaged 741,000, or 6,000 more than year-earlier totals, and production per cow was up 95 pounds, to 1,155.

In the Mid-Atlantic region, New York's production was up eight percent, while in Maryland, milk output increased 10 percent over last November's total.

Dr. Miller to speak at Maryland Alumni Dinner

COLLEGE PARK, MD – The newly appointed Vice President for Agricultural Affairs and Provost of the UMCP Division of Agricultural and Life Sciences, Dr. Raymond Miller, is slated as guest speaker for the annual College of Agriculture Alumni Faculty Fellowship Dinner Thursday, March 20 in Ellicott City, Md.

Miller, who assumed his position with The University of Maryland College Park Jan. 1, comes to UMCP from the University if Idaho, where he was dean of the College of Agriculture. Prior to joining the Idaho faculty, Miller held administrative and faculty appointments at the University of Illinois and North Carolina State University.

The new vice president and provost is the first person to hold the joint appointment at the College Park campus. The Board of Regents last year voted to combine the two positions, giving the incumbent strong authority to direct statewide programs in agriculture.

As vice president, Miller is responsible to University President John S. Toll for Universty-wide coordination of agricultural programs and the general direction of statewide aspects of the Agricultural Experiment Station and the Cooperative Extension Service. As provost he is the chief executive of the Division of Agricultural and Life Sciences on the College Park Campus and reports to the vice chancellor for academic affairs.

An agronomist by training, Miller received his doctorate in soil physical chemistry from Purdue University in 1962, and is a fellow of the American Society of Agronomy and of the Soil Science Society of America.

Awards for excellence in research, teaching and extension will be presented to three current UMCP faculty, rounding out the evening's activities at the March 20 dinner. The Agriculture Alumni Chapter, will also recognize meritorious service by an alumnus and an outstanding senior agriculture major, according to current chapter president David Miller ('66) of Frederick.

The annual dinner begins at 6:30 p.m. at the Turf Valley Country Club in Ellicott City. Reservations are $16 ($8 for UMCP students). Advance registration is required; requests should be sent to Bob Beiter, College of Agriculture, 2113 Symons Hall, University of Maryland, College Park, MD 20742.

Alfalfa growers demand the best.

"Seedway recommends Nestor Tetraploid Perennial Ryegrass for Growers Using Alfalfa-Ryegrass Mixtures."

Elmer Martin, Sr. — Paul Zimmerman

"I'm going to plant three more bags of Cimarron Alfalfa this Spring because it's my best Alfalfa," Paul Zimmerman, dairy farmer at Bernville, Pa. told Elmer Martin, Sr. in mid-February. Elmer is a salesman for Farm Bureau at their new Van-Mar Feeds Division located in Shoemakersville, Pa.

Paul hydro-seeded his Cimarron at a 20 pound per acre rate in the Spring of 1983. He remarks from his field notes, "last summer my Cimarron first cutting averaged 130 bales per acre and the other varieties yielded less than Cimarron, down to one that did 64 bales per acre. Cimarron gives alfalfa," this quietly aggressive young farmer finishes.

to shows and auctions. They saw other tractors they liked and started to buy. Then, says Revenna, other people found out they collected tractors and asked the Barricks to find specific tractors for them.

Now the Barricks attend at least one show per month, traveling as far as New York, Toledo, and Lafayette, Indiana. The Carlisle show will be the first where they will sell some of their collection.

Brandon runs a dairy operation with his father Boyd Weary and his brother Brian at R.D. #6, Newville. Nothing against Olivers, says Brandon, but he prefers Allis-Chalmers tractors, both in the fields and in the collector's showcase. About half his collection are Allis-Chalmers.

"I just like to collect," says Brandon. "Just to keep them in the family and to pass on to my family, whenever that starts." His admitted favorite is a mint condition Allis-Chalmers 7030, with a maroon belly. Since he purchased it, Brandon says the tractor's value has gone up at least eight times. Part of this is because Allis-Chalmers made a newer series of tractors with a black belly.

Revenna says, "I don't think people will realize the value of the toys they have until they go to the show and see what these tractors bring across the country." Most of the toys are made of metal, plastic or cast iron. Tractor sizes range from 1/64th scale, matchbox size, through table top size, which is 1/16th scale. There will be some pedal tractors at the sale.

She notes the nostalgia aspect as well. "This has to be something that interests you, something from your past. One man started collecting because he saw a tractor like one his father used to use."

Brandon adds, "When I'm an old man I can tell my grandkids, that's what I farmed with when I was a boy."

Cuomo honors Cornell extension

ITHACA, NY — Governor Mario M. Cuomo has issued a special proclamation honoring Cornell Cooperative Extension for the 75 years of service that its agents have provided the people of New York State.

The proclamation designates the week of March 9-15 "Cornell Cooperative Extension Week." That coincides with the 75th anniversary of the appointment of the first county agent in New York State.

"In the seventy five years since that auspicious event, Cornell Cooperative Extension agents have been invaluable friends and advisors to the people of New York State," the governor said in his proclamation. "Indeed, they are the principal intermediaries through which residents of the state.. derive benefit from the wide range of research activities and educational programs at Cornell University, the state's land-grant institution."

In addition to the governor's proclamation, the state legislature is expected to act on a resolution commemorating that anniversary.

On March 1, 1911, John Barron of Broome County became the first agent at Binghamton. Barron later served as an extension professor of agronomy in what is now the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell. He pioneered the role of Cornell Cooperative Extension agents who today serve in every county of the state and in New York City.

"Working in each of the state's 62 counties, Cornell Cooperative Extension agents serve individuals, families, businesses, and communities in rural, suburban, and urban areas," Cuomo said. "They enrich the lives of their fellow New York State residents by planning and implementing an impressive variety of programs pertaining to agriculture and natural resources, community issues, 4-H activities and youth development, home economics, and Sea Grant."

"By taking active leadership roles in their communities," Cuomo noted, "Cornell Cooperative Extension agents make particular contributions in areas that include... nutrition education; farm business management; housing improvement; family concerns; energy conservation; the development of coastal resources; land-use planning; dairy, livestock, and field-crop production; home and commercial horticulture; and the expansion of tourism."

Cornell Cooperative Extension Week will be highlighted by the 51st annual 4-H Capital Days celebration in Albany, March 10-11. Each year, about 100 4-H members from throughout the state travel to Albany to meet state officials and to learn about the workings of the state government.

Cornell Cooperative Extension is part of the national Cooperative Extension system, which was established in 1914. Before that time, extension work was carried on informally by agricultural and youth organizations on local and state levels.

Farm management project underway

NEWARK, DE — The Delaware Cooperative Extension Service, with advice from a panel of farmers, will initiate a three-year farm management program in March. The goal of the project is to help farmers become more efficient managers through record-keeping and long-term analysis of individual fields and farms.

Initial meetings to launch the effort will take place at 1 p.m. in all three counties as follows:

- New Castle County - March 11, Kohl Demonstration Farm, Route 301 west of Middletown.
- Kent County - March 13, Kent County Extension Office, Room 2206, 300 S. New St., Dover.
- Sussex County - March 10, University of Delaware Research and Education Center, Route 9, Georgetown.

Farmers who wish to participate beyond the initial meeting will be charged a registration fee of $10 to cover the cost of materials. To preregister, contact the extension county agent in Newark, Dover or Georgetown.

Maryland sends spray notices

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — The Maryland Department of Agriculture is mailing gypsy moth spray notifications to residents living in proposed spray areas throughout the state.

These notices are printed on 8½"x14" legal size paper, folded in quarters and stapled closed. "IMPORTANT!" and "OFFICIAL NOTICE" appear on the front of the folded notice along with the state seal. Residents who receive one of these notices in the mail are being asked not to throw it away.

The notice contains information concerning the property to be sprayed, how the program works, how to keep informed about gypsy moth spraying in your area, time and place of any informational open houses, and what you must do to object. Also, this year's notice contains detailed information on both insecticides used – B t. (Bacillus thuringiensis) and Dimilin.

Property owners who receive one of these notices but do not want their property to be sprayed must let the department know of their objection in writing. All letters of objection must be postmarked by March 26, 1986. For more information contact Robert Tichenor or Nathan Erwin at 841-5922.

Crop insurance signup to end

NEWARK, DE. — Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey farmers interested in buying multi-peril insurance for their 1986 green pea or potato crops have until March 15 to sign-up.

"This is the first year that all crop insurance contracts in these three states will be based on individual farm production records," says University of Delaware assistant farm management specialist Mark Kooker. "Most farmers will find these new programs to be less expensive and also better at meeting their risk management needs."

Multi-peril crop insurance is offered through the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Policies insure against essentially all unavoidable hazards, including drought, freeze, hail, excess moisture, wind damage, insects and diseases.

There are several ways area farmers can find out about insuring their crops. They can contact an agent who sells crop insurance, or call their county extension office. In addition, growers interested in obtaining a computerized analysis of the cost versus the benefits of using multi-peril crop insurance on their farm can contact Kooker directly at (302) 451-2511.

Pennsylvania Holstein announces Spring Show

A cordial welcome is extended to you by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association to attend the 33rd Annual Pennsylvania Holstein Spring Show.

Time, these days, is of the utmost importance, especially to busy dairymen. But a day off spent with your fellow breeders and their cattle can pay you big dividends.

Keystone Holstein breeders have a real opportunity to see many of the state's top animals at the Farm Show Building in Harrisburg on Saturday, March 29, 1986 beginning at 8:30 a.m.

A day off on March 29 could easily be one of your most enjoyable days of the year. Exhibitors will bring their cattle to one location for your inspection. Make this your opportunity to compare cattle and learn from your fellow breeders.

We hope the ringside will be packed, for exhibitors travel many miles and spend many hours to present their animals at this show. No premiums are given, so the greatest reward for the exhibitor is an opportunity to present his best to a ringside crowded with fellow Holstein enthusiasts.

Make plans now with your family and neighbors to attend this show. You can make new friends, learn new things, and observe Pennsylvania's crop of truly outstanding Holsteins.

Pork meeting set

LANCASTER — A "hands-on approach to futures and options" will be offered at the Progressive Pork Producers Seminar Tuesday, March 18 at the Farm and Home Center. The program is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Pork Council and Penn State Extension.

Nitchie will do more than present a series of lectures. Participants will have a chance to call their own marketing shots in actual hedging and options situations.

The cost of the seminar is $10 per person, $15 for a husband and wife. Make checks payable to Pennsylvania Pork Council and mail to Chester D. Hughes, 1383 Arcadia Road, Room 1, Lancaster, PA 17601. Or phone Hughes directly at (717) 394-6851.

Search for cottage industry ends with patchwork comforters

BY BARBARA MILLER
Staff Correspondent

FORKSVILLE — Jane Roe of Sullivan County is a woman at home with a challenge, both figuratively and literally. In her quest for a small cottage industry she tried several crafts before discovering that people at craft shows stopped most often to admire her patchwork comforters.

When Jane's husband, Burgess, retired from the air force in 1977, the Roes and daughters Joanna and Linda settled on a 70-acre farm in Sullivan County. Jane is a native of the area, but Burgess found the rural setting attractive.

For a number of years Jane has been involved in the promotion of crafts in several counties. She just completed a term as president of the Craftsmen of the Endless Mountains and presently is a member of the Williamsport Chapter of the Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsmen, Old Fashioned Quilters of Sullivan County, the Pennsylvania Quilt Guild, and served as a volunteer to Elder Guild, a nonprofit organization established to promote the sale of crafts by senior citizens.

Four years ago Jane took a course in machine quilting and has been meeting the challenge of designing and making patchwork comforters and vests at her home. She sells her items at craft shows and on consignment to local stores.

Jane started her patchwork business because, "It was a challenge to see if I could do it." She quickly adds that, "Making money may be at the back of your mind, but you can't depend on making a living for a few years."

Jane sets aside a certain number of hours each week to do patchwork. Sometimes, she admits, her family stumbles through the living room and dishes wait, but she endeavors to keep those hours inviolate.

Jane's comforters are sewn entirely by machine and tied off with yard by hand. It is not possible, she believes, to turn a profit making handmade quilts.

Jane displays a chest of barnyard animals she made by strip-piecing sections of fabric.

Jane models one of her popular strip pieced vests.

Jane quilted this pillow cover in the Lone Star design by hand. This, she says, is an example of lap quilting, so called because the small frame is quite portable.

Most people, she explains, aren't willing to pay the high price for labor involved. "I can't compete with the Amish," she adds. "They don't pay themselves for their work."

Jane distinguished between handmade quilts and the machine quilted comforters she makes. One distinction she notes is that quilts are completed by taking tiny stitches by hand through the face and back of the quilt to hold it together. Whereas a comforter of Jane's is hand tied with yard to keep it together. She says a comforter usually has a loftier batt than a handmade quilt.

With several quilting courses and years of experience to her credit, Jane is brimful of advice for anyone interested in the craft. A person who makes and sells handcrafted items must wear three hats, she says. "I'm a designer, producer and marketer."

Designing her patchwork items, according to Jane, takes much of her time. "It may take me longer to design my colors than to do the manual work," she observes.

Again and again, Jane stresses the importance of color and states unequivocally that, "Coordinating colors is the most important part of patchwork." She is adamant about color choice, she says, because she has seen so many people misuse color.

Matching colors, Jane notes, comes naturally to some people, but it can and should be learned. She illustrates by showing one of her star design comforters worked in pleasing brown and white tones. The attractive comforter contained patches of solid colors, stripes, two small prints, and two large prints. She explained that the scale should not be the same and that comforters in shades of blue and earth tones sold best. Jane's comforters are made from cotton or cotton and polyester fabrics.

Jane strongly advises against using remnants for patchwork unless care is taken to purchase additional fabric to match and complement the existing materials. Remnant pieces alone seldom make pleasing color combinations, she stresses.

Jane cited the case of one woman who constructed a quilt solely from remnants. The woman reported that even after repeated dyings, her handmade patchwork quilt would not give up its clashing tones.

The quilt designs that Jane finds popular with customers are the Ohio Star and the Log Cabin designs. Jane, who has taken a course in pattern drafting, varies existing designs and creates her own patterns. A book that she says has helped her immensely with this is "Patchwork Patterns" by Jinny Beyer.

The next segment of patchwork is the actual construction of the comforters. This involves cutting the blocks of material, which Jane says takes a considerable amount of time. Instead of cardboard, Jane cuts templates from a lightweight, stiff sheet of plastic. This way, she explains, she doesn't have to worry about their shape changing with use as happens with cardboard.

In addition, she glues sandpaper on the bottom of each template to keep it in place while being used.

Have You Heard?

Stretch Your Milk Dollars

You can buy milk for your family in many forms - some costing considerably more than others. Price depends on whether milk is fresh, cultured, canned or dried; and whether vitamins and minerals and milk solids have been added.

The size of the milk container, where you buy milk, and whether it is home delivered make a difference in the price of milk, too.

Many families stretch their milk-buying dollars by using nonfat dry milk in place of whole fluid milk in cooking, and to some extent, as a beverage. Mixed with water to make fluid milk, nonfat dry milk costs only about one-half to two-thirds as much as an equal amount of fresh whole milk.

Cheese, ice cream, and other milk products can replace part of the milk you need. To find the best buys in hard cheeses, compare costs to equal weights of the varieties your family prefers. In most cases:

Natural cheeses, particularly those marked aged and sharp, cost more than process cheese.

Grated cheeses cost more than equal amounts of the same cheese in wedges or sticks.

Cheeses in large boxes and jars and cottage cheese in large cartons cost less per pound than in smaller containers.

Pasteurized process cheese costs more and has more cheese flavor than pasteurized process cheese spread.

Cottage cheese with fruit costs more than regular cottage cheese.

Yogurt, ice cream and ice milk can replace milk in diets, but at added cost. For example, ¾ cup of ice cream may cost three times as much as the ½ cup of fluid milk it replaces.

If There's A Will, There's A Way

You work hard to bring up your children. But, what happens if you die? Who will take care of them? If you've made a will, you've planned who will raise them and be responsible for their financial affairs. If you haven't made a will, the courts will appoint a guardian for you — often the nearest blood relative and not necessarily someone of your choice.

If parents die intestate (without a will), the courts usually appoint a financial guardian and a personal guardian for the surviving children. A surviving parent or grandparent is often the personal guardian. Another relative or friend is appointed the financial guardian.

When you are considering possible guardians, think about how well their ideals and interests fit yours. Think about their financial situation, and yours. Think about their interest in taking responsibility for your children. Often young parents name their parents as guardians. This can lead to problems as your parents age. Choosing whose brother or sister or what friend would be best is not easy.

When you do decide, discuss it thoroughly with the person. Before they agree, they should have a clear idea of your intentions and your hopes for your children.

None of us plan to die. But, for your children's sake, make plans for their future without you.

Grange toy contest opens

CENTRE HALL — Ronald McDonald Houses throughout the nation will be among the hospitals, medical care facilities, and children's homes that receive toys made for the 10th Annual National Grange Stuffed Toy Contest.

Ten percent of the toys made nationally are pledged to the Ronald Houses, which are family living facilities located near major medical centers where children with serious illnesses are treated. All toys made for this contest are donated to hospitals, children's homes, similar facilities, most of them in local Grange areas.

Entry blanks are available for the 1986 National Grange Stuffed Toy Contest, sponsored locally by Progress Grange. Mrs. Lucille Dashem of Centre Hall, Pa., Women's Activities Chairman, said the contest is open to both members and non-members of the Grange. Entry blanks, copies of the contest rules and list of awards can be obtained by contacting Mrs. Homan at 364-1258; Mrs. Shawver at 364-9226; Mrs. Grubb at 364-1239; or Mrs. Dashem at 364-1143.

Plastic similar to what she uses, she says, can be found in department stores in the children's toy section under the name, "Shrinky Dink."

A sharp pencil and scissors are a must when marking and cutting blocks, Jane says. She also advises that a bias block never be put on the outside of a pattern and that seams of patches be butted to the left and right of each other.

Concerning marketing of her goods, Jane prefers selling on consignment to local stores and attending craft shows to selling from her home. By doing this, she explains, she doesn't have to be home at certain hours.

One of the things a newcomer must learn, according to Jane, is which shows to attend. She recommends striving to associate with quality craft people and advises against exhibiting crafts at flea markets. Additionally, she says, a serious craftsperson should maintain her price. Regardless of differing commissions paid by the craftsperson, the price should remain the same within a very large locale. There should not be differing prices for the same item in neighboring stoes, she says, or even in neighboring towns.

Lastly, Jane counsels newcomers to attach a business card to each piece of merchandise and to keep an attractive booth. She says a craftsperson has only 10 to 20 seconds to catch the attention of a passerby with her wares.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Finally my one winter project is finished. I now have a red and blue braided rug in our fireplace room. But am I satisfied? No, I dash off to a Goodwill Store to hunt wool material for another rug. And I am lucky as I arrive just two days before the spring and summer clothes are displayed. So I pick some jumpers, suits, slacks and skirts that are the proper colors for a minimal price.

In order to have a break in my work of basting and braiding, I decide to try to make some order out of a big camel-back trunk of pictures. They had been sorted previously, but more were added from my mother's collection

Many of them are of the seven Shreiner sisters sitting in fallen fruit trees. For some reason every time that a cherry, apple or pear tree was blown down in a storm, my mother got out her camera and took our picture.

Some photos are of disasters that we'd like to forget, such as my father's metal silo that broke in half one night and surely was a sorry sight as it had just been filled. Another shows our barn after a disastrous fire.

Others are of my husband butchering three hogs beside a big steaming kettle, one of my grandfather stirring apple butter and one of me skinning a groundhog. Of course, we recorded new babies, graduations and weddings too, plus family picnics.

I also have a lot of my mother's photographs taken about 1910 in the village of Oregon along the Lititz Creek. Most of the people pictured are gone and the buildings are being converted to other uses. Some pictures of our immediate family will be shared with our children and others stored away again. It was a nice interlude in my winter activities.

Riding Clinic planned

CREAMERY — Susan Harris, well-noted riding instructor and author, returns to Pennsylvania and Wise Acres Farm on March 7th, 8th, and 9th to share her talents.

Harris will present Sally Swift's concepts of centered riding in her Friday evening orientation and put them to practice in her instruction on Saturday and Sunday. It is an opportunity to get in on the ground floor of a technique helpful to all riders and horses. The United States Equestrian Team and other of the nation's top riders have benefited from centered riding.

The clinic will fulfill the popular demand for introduction to centered riding techniques. Auditors should register in advance so that we can accommodate you for the Friday session. Saturday's sessions will consist of classes of 4 to 6 riders lasting one hour. Riders may choose to ride on the flat or in a jumping class or both. Each session is $25. Sunday morning is reserved for private lessons for which the fee is $30 per hour.

Wise Acres Farms is located in Hatfield. For more details on the clinic contact Linda Newbauer at (215) 723-8060.

Watch your waist with a mushroom feast

If watching your weight and maintaining your health top your list of priorities, mushrooms will fit right into your game plan. Not only are fresh mushrooms a smart vegetable; they're a boon in the diet as well.

Consider that fresh mushrooms have only 28 calories per 3½-ounce serving. And, they are high in potassium (414 mg. per 3½-ounce serving), a nutrient important in managing hypertension and heart problems.

If these facts haven't convinced you, take a hefty bite of a fresh, white mushroom or try one of the mushroom recipes below.

MUSHROOMS AMANDINE

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 small onion, finely chopped
1 pound fresh, small mushrooms; or whole or large mushrooms, quartered
3 tablespoons sliced almonds, toasted
1/8 teaspoon ground nutmeg
Dash of pepper

In a large skillet, melt butter; add onion and cook until transparent. Add mushrooms; saute over medium-high heat about 4 to 5 minutes until golden, shaking pan frequently. Add nuts, nutmeg and pepper. Serve immediately.

MUSHROOMS PARMESAN

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 pound fresh, small whole mushrooms
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
1/8 teaspoon peppper

In a large skillet, melt butter; add mushrooms, a few at a time, and cook over medium-high heat about 4 to 5 minutes until golden. Shake pan frequently during cooking. Sprinkle with cheese and pepper; cook 1 minute longer. Makes 4 servings.

ZUCCHINI MUSHROOM FRITTATA

3½ cups (3 medium) 1/8-inch sliced zucchini
1 cup thinly sliced onion
1 cup sliced mushrooms (1 4-ounce can sliced, drained mushrooms can be substituted for fresh)
¼ cup butter
6 eggs
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup undiluted evaporated milk
¼ cup water
½ teaspoon basil leaves
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Saute vegetables in butter in oven-proof 10-inch skillet until zucchini is crisp-tender. Cool slightly. Beat eggs in medium bowl. Add remaining ingredients; beat thoroughly. Add to skillet, pushing vegetables down into egg mixture.

Bake in slow oven (325°F.) 20 to 25 minutes or until eggs are set. Cut into wedges to serve.

MUSHROOMS AND BACON

4 slices bacon, diced
1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
Pepper

In a large skillet, saute bacon over medium-high heat 5 to 7 minutes, until almost crisp. Drain all but ½ tablespoon fat. Add mushrooms; cook 4 to 5 minutes. Season with pepper. Serve on toast as breakfast or luncheon dish.

1 pint shucked oysters
2 one-pound cans tomatoes
Oyster liquor, tomato liquid plus water to equal 2 cups

ANSWER - Mrs. Samuel J. Fulkroad, Millersburg, requested a recipe for caramel icing using egg yolks. Thanks go to Mrs. Kitty Wagner, Elizabethtown, for the following recipe.

Caramel Cream Frosting

Caramelized Syrup:

2 cups sugar
1 cup boiling water

Pour sugar in heavy skillet. Melt over low heat, stirring constantly with wooden spoon to prevent burning. (Don't worry about lumps.) When sugar becomes a clear brown syrup, remove from heat. Stir in boiling water, slowly. Return to low heat and stir until smooth. Cool. Pour into clean jar, cover tightly. Keeps 6 to 8 weeks at room temperature.

For frosting:

Cream together 6 tablespoons soft butter and 1 egg yolk (beaten). Beat in 5 tablespoons carmalized syrup and 4 cups sifted confectioner's sugar. Add 1 teaspoon almond extract and 2 tablespoons cream. Beat until smooth and creamy enough to spread.

Another use for the syrup is Caramel Sundae Sauce:

¼ cup hot water
½ cup syrup (caramelized)
½ cup chopped nuts

Combine all ingredients. Chill. Serve over ice cream.

THE MADISON WAY IS THE VERY BEST WAY!

Fulton Grange 66

Fulton Grange No. 66 met Feb. 24th with the Master, J. Everett Kreider, presiding.

The group made plans to hold their annual family-style roast turkey supper Saturday April 5th from 4 to 7:30 p.m. at the Grange Hall in Oakryn. Tickets will be $5 for adults and $2.50 for children 5 to 12. Children under the age of five can eat free. Take-outs will be available. Women's Activities committee members Linda Martin, Henrietta Wallace, AnnaBell Wiley and Dorothy Reath are planning the menu.

Tour committee chairman Clifford Holloway Jr. reported the bus to the Tulip Festival in Holland, Mich., is full and the committee is taking only stand-by reservations. The trip will be May 13 through 18, inclusive. It will include seeing the tulip gardens, attending the street dance in Holland, visiting a wooden shoe factory, attending the Dutch Heritage pageant, having lunch at the gardens, taking a dune buggy ride, eating at Bob Evans Restaurant, visiting the Ford Museum and another museum and the Cathedral of Tomorrow, as well as some other places of interest enroute.

The Master appointed the following on a committee in charge of the annual Grange Week celebration locally: Charles McSparran, Debra Metzler and Virgil Van Natta. It will be observed by Granges all over the nation April 20 through 26. Fulton Grange will hold Open House April 28 when the public is invited. Fulton Grange will also host the spring meeting of Lancaster County Pomona Grange 71 Saturday, April 19th at 8 p.m.

There was some discussion on reorganizing a Junior Grange and the following were appointed to see if there is enough interest: Linda Martin, Debra Metzler and Margorie McCauley.

In other business a $25 donation was voted for the Pennsylvania State Grange Junior Grange Promotional Fund.

Lecturer Betty Wise presented a program which included several contests and quizzes. Mrs. Resa Workman was scheduled to speak on the Hospice program in Lancaster County, but due to the weather and bad driving conditions she was unable to attend.

Fred J. Fisher, Boy Scout Commissioner, will speak on scouting at the next meeting, March 10th.

Kid's Korner

Hiding behind deceptive black masks, two raccoon dogs prowl in Japan. Although they look and act must like raccoons, they are actually members of the canine family. Wild raccoon dogs range from the tropics to Siberia. Others are raised on farms in Finland; their coats sell for as much as $5,000 in New York. American scientists are studying the Japanese raccoon dog's habits and a genetic makeup that sets it apart from the rest.

Raccoon or dog? Scientists ponder animals' identity

HANOVER, NH — From the side, it looks like a short, pudgy dog with pointy ears and nose and salt-and-pepper coat. Face to face, it's pure raccoon.

Its black face mask is one reason the animal is known to Western scientists — the few who study it — as the raccoon dog. And although it's a member of the Canidae, or dog, family, some of its habits are uncannily raccoonlike.

In Japan, one of its native lands, it's more folk hero than canid. The Japanese believe raccoon dogs, which they call tanukis, to be crafty and magical, able to vanish and reappear in different forms.

Prowl by Night

The Japanese say tanukis revel by the light of the new moon, and they may be right. Raccoon dogs are mostly nocturnal, and until recently no one knew much about their activities at night — or during the day. Two American scientists, Dr. Doris Wurster-Hill of Dartmouth College and Dr. Oscar Ward of the University of Arizona, have spent months trailing the raccoon dog, but a host of curiosities remain:

• Although the raccoon dog is definitely considered a dog, it doesn't act much like one. It is most active at night; is partial to river valleys and lakes (as are raccoons); devours nuts, berries, and fish but will raid garbage cans; climbs fences rather than jumps them; and doesn't bark. When retreating, however, it often steals a backward glance at its pursuer, in the manner of a coyote. And in winter, it dens up for semihibernation, somewhat like a bear.

• Raccoon dogs can live almost anywhere, from tropical rain forests to Siberia. Yet no one knows their actual range today. Native to Southeast Asia, China, and the Soviet Union, they were introduced by the thousands in the 1920s to Eastern Europe and Finland as fur bearers. (Raccoon dog coats are still sold, sometimes as "Asiatic raccoon.") In recent years, individual raccoon dogs have been sighted as far south as Vietnam and as far west as Switzerland and England.

• While some scientists consider it a primitive dog — raccoon dog fossils from China date to the Pliocene — others believe it's most closely related to foxes. And although classified as one species, the raccoon dog is actually five separate races, two of which are genetically distinct. The number of chromosomes — the blueprint for heredity found in the cells of living creatures — is only about 38 to 42 in

Chromosome Puzzle

The average number of chromosomes also varies from dog to dog and from cell to cell within individual raccoon dogs from Japan, an abnormal situation for mammals. The Japanese dogs also possess from two to five extra chromosomes, whose function is a puzzle, and some of the dogs bear an oddly shaped X chromosome.

• Some reference books have listed the raccoon dog as nearly extinct, yet Ward and Wurster-Hill encountered numerous tales of Japanese farmers shooting the animals as pests. In one of the two research sites, a different raccoon dog was trapped every night.

• The scant scientific literature on the dogs reports "fainting when frightened," and that's almost accurate. Ward reports that though the dogs were feisty and hissing like a cat during capture, "they grew passive and quiet in our arms, apparently with a lowered heart rate. It was as if they were afraid to offend."

Hoping to unravel some of the raccoon dog's secrets, Wurster-Hill and Ward chose two Japanese islands — Honshu and Kyushu — for their study, which was supported by the National Geographic Society and Earthwatch. Scientists presume the animals traveled to the islands over an ancient land bridge from mainland Asia.

The study sites, separated by more than 1,000 miles of mountains and water, were contrasting raccoon dog habitats. Though low in elevation, the site on northern Honshu was steeply mountainous, covered with hardwood forests, while the Kyushu site was a 3,000-foot-high platform studded with steaming volcanoes and thick with bamboo undergrowth.

The research teams battled typhoon rains, dense fog, snow, and always the inky night. "In the northern site, the innkeepers didn't understand what we were doing," recalls Wurster-Hill, who is a specialist in chromosomal studies. "Instead of going to bed at night, we put on coats and went out."

Pursuit Through Bamboo

The scientists spent nearly sleepless nights hiking vertical terrain or crawling through dense bamboo in pursuit of a dog, regularly checking traps that had been baited with cooked chicken heads (a raccoon dog favorite). If a dog was snared in one of the traps, the scientists would retrieve it, transport it on foot to a cabin, where under car headlights it was examined, measured, and biopsied. Skin samples had to be rushed to an airport by 7:30 the next morning to go to a laboratory for analysis.

Meanwhile, the dog was fitted with a radio collar so it could be tracked electronically through the woods. And its belly and legs were dusted with fluorescent powder so that as it traveled the undergrowth, it left a trail.

In all, 13 dogs were captured, fitted with collars, and released. Analysis of data from this preliminary study is not complete, but it appears that Japan's raccoon dogs are more active during the day than previously believed, and less solitary. The scientists would pick up simultaneous signals of a male and female dog, indicating they were together outside of mating season.

The animals seem to have a loose system of territories for resting; on Kyushu especially, each animal remained in a fixed area, with little overlap. And though they're generally sedentary, one monitored dog wandered at least 10 miles in 24 hours.

Wurster-Hill and Ward hope results of the chromosomal analysis and future field work will explain exactly where in the dog family the raccoon dog fits. And, they would like to discover other raccoon dog races that bridge the chromosomal gap, from 38 to 56. Or, they wonder, has the missing link magically vanished, in the style of the tanuki?

Cornell offers updated vegetable varieties list

ITHACA, NY — Home gardeners in New York State need look no farther than their county Cooperative Extension agents when it comes to selecting vegetable varieties for the 1986 growing season.

In addition to existing resources and their own knowledge of vegetable crops, these agents have the 1986 "Selected List of Vegetable Varieties for Home Garden Use in New York State."

Updated annually by Cornell University experts, the list includes more than 400 varieties of vegetables that have been proven in university test gardens.

Instead of browsing through the thousands of selections offered in commercial seed catalogs, a gardener, at a glance, can use the list to select varieties that have a good track record in New York State.

This year's list was compiled by Roger A. Kline, a Cornell Cooperative Extension associate, and David Wolfe, an assistant professor of vegetable crops, both in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

"We've selected these varieties by testing them, usually two years or more, in Ithaca and often in other areas of the state," Kline says.

Information about varieties on the Cornell list was also collected from Cooperative Extension agents, commercial growers, and home gardeners.

This year, several varieties of Chinese cabbage have been added to the list, as well as varieties of bush bean, lettuce, peas, pumpkins, and radishes, among others.

"By no means are we saying these are the only ones that will grow well, but they have proven themselves in the unpredictable, sometimes adverse conditions that New York has to offer," Kline explains.

Kline says that the varieties included on the list are chosen based on their yield, tolerance to disease and insects, quality of the crop, taste, and other factors essential for gardening success.

Crops included in the 1986 Cornell list range from common vegetables such as summer squash, tomato, watermelon, and turnip to exotic vegetables such as chicory, kohlrabi, leek, kale and several types of hot peppers.

New additions to the list this year include: "Jumbo" green bush bean; "Captain Marvel" brussels sprouts; "Erdeno" and "Brutus" late storage cabbages; "Spring A-1," "Lei Choy," "Prize Choy," "What-A-Joy," "Two Seasons," and "Dynasty" Chinese cabbage varieties; "Aldo" endive; and several chicory varieties.

Other new varieties include: "Burpee Iceberg" and "King Crown" crisphead lettuce; "Kagran Summer" and "Patty" butterhead lettuce; "Red Sails" and "Lil Sweetie" looseleaf lettuce; the "Green Towers" cos lettuce; "Snowflake" snow pea; "Big Max" and "Atlantic" giant squashes; "Baby Pam" pumpkin; "Summer Cross" radish; and "Taxi" yellow tomato.

For a free copy of the list, contact your local Cooperative Extension agents, or send a self-addressed, stamped long envelope to Roger Kline, Department of Vegetable Crops, Plant Science Building, Cornell University, Ithaca, NY 14853-5908.

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

Microwaving Winter Vegetables

Vegetables are fantastic when they're cooked in a microwave They are picture perfect in color, high in vitamins, delicious and very quick and easy to cook

So easy and fast that a lady in one of my microwave classes said she and her husband had cooked and eaten 10 pounds of baked potatoes the first week they'd had their microwave!

If you're new to microwaving, here are a few hints for cooking your greenies Most vegetables are steamed in the microwave, so use high power, with very little water I use just enough water to barely cover the bottom of my container about two to four tablespoons

A tight fitting cover is important, to contain the steam Plastic wrap can be used to cover a serving dish that has no lid If your plastic wrap melts (from the heat the steam rising in the container) switch brands Heavy duty plastic wraps and microwave plastic wraps are made of a different plastic that has a higher melting point than cheaper brands

When you cover a container with plastic wrap, "vent" (leave open a little) one corner of the container This permits excess steam to escape so the plastic doesn't blow up like a balloon and burst

Remove covers carefully on vegetables, the steam can give your hands or face a bad burn Open lids away from you, and keep your fingers clear of the escaping steam

Don't sprinkle salt on your vegetables before microwaving Root vegetables will be dehydrated by the salt, making them tough Other vegetables may get burned spots where the salt lands

Drain the liquid from the container and season vegetables after the microwave time, but before the vegetables' standing time

Speaking of standing time, this is a short time of "carry-over cooking" that occurs after foods are microwaved Vegetables usually need four or five minutes of standing time, and become much more tender during this time

Don't try to cook the vegetables until they are tender Microwave them for the times given in your directions, then let them sit, covered, on your counter for a few minutes before dishing them out

Wrap baked potatoes in a small terry towel during standing time This keeps them piping hot yet lets the steam escape so they don't get soggy

How long should you cook vegetables? This depends on your microwave and the type of vegetable The best guide for you is the cooking charts in your oven's cookbook For commercially frozen vegetables, most packages have cooking times on the package Canned vegetables should be drained before warming, unless you plan to serve the liquid with the vegetable

Fresh vegetables can be weighed and cooked on high for 6 to 7 minutes per pound Pierce the skin on potatoes and squash if they are to be cooked whole If slicing or cutting vegetables, try to make uniformly sized pieces

Arrange the vegetables in your container with the tough stems or with larger pieces on the outside corners If the pieces are the same size, stir once during the cooking time for even cooking

Cabbage and carrots are two fresh vegetables that are inexpensive and readily available in winter These two recipes are easy and delicious

Honey Glazed Carrots

6 carrots (about 1 pound)
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon honey
¼ teaspoon salt

1 Scrape and slice carrots diagonally into ¼-inch slices Put in a one-quart casserole with water, cover

2 Microwave on high for 7 to 8 minutes, stirring after 4 minutes, until almost tender

3 Drain Stir in butter, honey and salt, stirring until the butter melts and the carrots are well coated Leave uncovered and microwave on high for 4 minutes until the carrots are glazed

4 Cover and let stand for 5 minutes until the carrots are fully tender Serves 4

TIP:

--Recipe may be cut in half Cut ingredients and cooking times in half, but still let stand 5 minutes

--For a gourmet vegetable, Ginger Glazed Carrots, stir in ¼ teaspoon ground ginger with the butter and honey

Red Cabbage and Apples is delicious with pork, and a nice change from sauerkraut This recipe reheats well and the flavor improves by cooking the day before, refrigerating and reheating

onion chopped
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 head red cabbage, shredded (about 1 pound)
½ teaspoon salt
3 large tart apples, peeled and chopped
2 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons cider vinegar

1 Combine onion and butter in a 3-quart casserole Cover and microwave on high for 3 minutes, stirring halfway through, until the onion is almost tender

2 Stir in cabbage and salt Cover and microwave on high for 10 minutes, stirring once halfway through

3 Stir in apples and microwave on high for 5 minutes Combine sugar and vinegar and stir into the cabbage Recover and microwave on high for 5 minutes longer until cabbage and apples are tender

4 Let stand covered for 5 to 10 minutes, for the flavor to develop, before serving Or cool and refrigerate To reheat heat on high power, stirring frequently until hot Serves 8 to 10

NOTE: The Cooking times above are for microwaves with 600-700 watts of power; for 500-600 W, add 10 seconds to each minute, for 400-500 W, add 20 seconds to each minute

Floriculture research conference planned

ITHACA, NY Cornell University will sponsor a "Commercial Floriculture Research Conference" March 13 to keep leaders of the nation's floriculture industry up to date on the latest research developments at the University

The one-day event is sponsored by the Interdepartmental Floriculture Program consisting of the departments of floriculture and ornamental horticulture, agricultural engineering, entomology, plant pathology, and agricultural economics in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell

Thomas C Weiler, chairman of the conference and a specialist in florist crops at Cornell, says the conference could attract more than 200 participants from throughout the United States and Canada The conference is free

Previously, the conference was called "Floriculture and Ornamental Horticulture Open House" Along with the name change, the event will be held in March instead of January The reason for the change is to avoid holding a major floriculture conference in the middle of a frigid winter when inclement weather often hampers participation, according to Weiler In addition, many florist crops grown in numerous research projects being conducted by students and faculty will be in better shape for viewing in March

The plenary session will be held in James Law Auditorium on campus in the morning, featuring a series of talks ranging from crop production systems to marketing trends for florist products Other topics on the agenda include computerized environmental control for greenhouse operations, insect and disease problems affecting florist crops, and pesticide regulations

The afternoon program will take place at the Kenneth Post Bioclimatic Laboratory and its greenhouse complex, where participants will view florist and ornamental crops and discuss research projects involving these crops with faculty, staff, and students

Projects to be discussed include computer-assisted sensors used for control of environmental conditions in greenhouses, energy conservation devices for greenhouse operations, year-round tomato production, miniature roses grown in pots, garden summer bulbs such as lycoris and colchicum, lily forcing and fertilization trials, rose production systems, studies of carbon dioxide levels and other factors crucial for photosynthesis, root zone-heating, and viral diseases affecting roses

The New York State Floriculture Industries, a statewide organization representing a cross section of the floriculture industry, will have a special display on its research and development activities

A special tour of the Mineral Nutrient Analysis Laboratory at Cornell will be conducted starting at 7 30 a.m The laboratory analyzes soil, foliage, and water samples for the status of mineral nutrients for commercial growers

For more information about the program, contact Thomas Weiler, Department of Floriculture and Ornamental Horticulture, Plant Science Building, Cornell University Ithaca, NY 14850-5908, or call (607) 256-2166

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 1

Lancaster Society 1 met March 1 in the home of Della Bollinger in Lititz.

Shirley Stephens, a former teacher and administrator in the Philadelphia schools, talked about "Life with the Royal Family in Kuwait." Mrs. Stephens was a teacher for the royal family's children and she gave an account of her life in the Royal Palace and the people of Kuwait.

The president reported on the county board meeting. Lancaster Farm Women will have their Spring Rally on May 28 at the York Fairgrounds. Peter Wambach, a state legislator from Dauphin County, will be the featured speaker.

Trips planned for this summer include: The Topiaray Gardens, a Lancaster County trip with Bob Nepp; and Cape May, with Conestoga Tours.

The next meeting will be Saturday, April 5, at the Farm and Home Center. Society 33 will be the group's guests. Amy Brubaker, Mary Kreider and Beverly Hossler will hostess.

Lancaster Society 2

Lancaster Society 2 held its February meeting at the home of Esther Farrel of Manheim with Mabel Pinkerton as co-hostess.

Four members celebrated their birthdays this month and were honored at this meeting.

Members were asked to contribute items to be sold on April 12. The sale, to be held at Park City Shopping Center, will benefit LARK.

Members were invited to participate in a bus trip to the Philadelphia Flower Show. Those interested should contact Mae Hosler by calling 665-4640.

Lancaster Society 5

Lancaster Society 5 met at the home of Gloria Myers on Feb. 22.

Because the January meeting was cancelled, the group heard convention reports at this meeting. Betty Heisy demonstrated gift wrapping ideas.

The next meeting will be March 22, when Les Laskowski, a podiatrist, will speak.

Lancaster Society 11

Lancaster Society 11 met on Feb. 27 at the home of Aleta Wilbar.

Anita Reed and Esther Graybeal of the Historical Society showed slides of local historical places.

Lancaster Society 12

Lancaster Society 12 entertains Society 9 at a covered dish meal on March 15 at noon at the Lions Club Building, North Charlotte Street, Millersville.

Lancaster Society 14

Lancaster Society 14 met at the home of Mrs. Leon Thomas, Hollinger Road, on Feb. 12.

State convention reports were given by Elma Barge, Gladys Hospenshade, Edna Groff and Jean Thomas. Esther Landis reported on the county board meeting.

The members traveled with Jean Thomas as she told the highlights of her life from Iowa, where she was born, and where she met her husband, who was from Lancaster County. They also toured Jean and Leon's new home, the "Historic Hollinger House."

The group has planned a bus trip for April 17 to Harrisburg, where they will tour the governor's mansion, the capitol and William Penn Museum, as well as Indian Echo Caverns and the Information Center of Three Mile Island. Anyone interested (members or non-members) should contact Janet Leaman at 687-7175.

Lancaster Society 22

Lancaster County dairy princess Janae Martin spoke to members of Lancaster Society 22 during a recent meeting. Janae talked about good nutrition and the role dairy products play in a balanced diet.

Breast milk or formula?

Lifestyle, preference, influence feeding method for infants

NEWARK, DE – "The decision to breast-feed or bottle-feed an infant is a personal one," says Dr. Sue Snider, University of Delaware extension food and nutrition specialist. "Each family must take into account its lifestyle and preferences."

In one generation the United States has gone from a predominantly breast-feeding to a predominantly formula-feeding society. However, the trend is beginning to reverse and more women are deciding to breast-feed their infants. Each woman should make her decision free from both medical and social pressures, says Snider.

Human milk is regarded as the most desirable source of nutrients for the infant. According to the specialist, it contains ideal amounts of proteins and fats in a readily digestible form. In addition, the iron in human milk is more easily absorbed than that in cow's milk, she says.

"Besides nutrition, overfeeding and infant obesity are concerns," notes Snider. "Some studies show a higher rate of obesity in formula-fed infants than breast-fed ones. When a mother sees formula remaining in a bottle she often encourages a baby to finish it all–even after the baby is full. A breast-fed infant eats only to satisfy hunger.

"In addition, studies have shown that milk from nursing mothers contains more fat and protein toward the end of a feeding, which may signal an infant to feel satisfied," says the specialist. "Breast-feeding also tends to delay the introduction of solids which can add greatly to an infant's daily calories. And early introduction of solids may also lend to allergies later in life."

There is increasing evidence that newborns can acquire certain disease resistance from mother's milk while their own immune systems are maturing, says Snider. Human milk contains antibodies which may help protect breast-fed infants from intestinal infections.

Early maternal infant bonding can be critical to the later relationship between mother and child. Breast-feeding favors the development of this emotional bond while meeting an infant's most basic need for nourishment.

Another benefit to nursing mothers is the production of the hormone, oxytocin, which stimulates contraction of the uterus after childbirth and thus helps control blood loss.

Most women who choose to breast-feed enjoy the ease with which they feed their babies, particularly in the middle of the night. Time not spent sterilizing bottles and preparing formula can be used to enjoy and get to know the new family member.

In spite of all these advantages breast-feeding does have some disadvantages, Snider says. For example, many women now work outside their home, and the combination of breast-feeding an infant and working is not an easy one.

"A working woman may be able to continue nursing her baby if she can go home for lunch," says Snider. "She could also express and store her breast milk for the caregiver to feed the infant during the day. This would allow her to continue nursing without the a significant reduction in the amount of milk she produces.

"Another option a nursing mother has is to supplement the infant's diet with formula," says Snider. "Breast-feeding after returning to work takes planning, but it can be successfully achieved.

Breast-feeding may be difficult even for the woman who doesn't work outside the home. Because she is the sole provider of her infant's nourishment, her activities must revolve around the feeding schedule, or she must arrange for the infant to be bottle-fed when she's away at feeding time.

The specialist notes that there are times when breast-feeding is not recommended. If a mother is taking a drug that is excreted in her milk and is known to be potentially dangerous to infants, breast-feeding should be avoided. In these cases, an infant must be formula-fed.

"For breast-feeding to be successful and pleasant for mother and baby, a woman needs the emotional support of her family," says Snider. "If her husband is strongly opposed to breast-feeding, it may be best for everyone if she gives in gracefully and switches to formula feeding."

Formula Feeding

"Although breast milk is regarded as the most desirable source of nutrients for infants, mothers who choose to formula-feed should be assured that their infants will grow and develop normally," says Dr. Sue Snider.

Commercial formulas now closely approximate the nutritional characteristics of human milk, says the specialist. In addition, special formulas are available for low birthweight infants and those with severe allergies. Snider cautions against using cow's milk during a baby's first year. "Cow's milk doesn't supply nutrients in proper amounts for a growing baby," she says.

One advantage of bottle-feeding is that other family members can get involved during the infant's mealtime. This helps develop family unity and allows a mother some free time for rest and relaxation. Formula-feeding may also provide a less stressful transition for a woman returning to work–a caregiver can easily bottle-feed her baby.

Unlike breast milk, which is ready to feed whenever an infant is hungry, formula must be prepared beforehand. "Read directions carefully," advises Snider. "Some commercial formulas are ready to feed. They only need to be placed in sterile bottles and heated. But liquid and powder concentrates must be mixed with water before feeding. If a formula is mixed incorrectly, it may be either too diluted or too concentrated for a baby. Either way, it's improper nutrition."

Snider cautions against contaminating the formula during preparation. "First, take care to wash your hands and all utensils, including the outside of the cans of formula, bottles and nipples."

Once opened, cans of formula should be covered and refrigerated. Formula left in a bottle after a feeding must be discarded, says Snider, as the baby's saliva has contaminated it.

Finally, don't force a baby to finish the formula in a bottle when he or she is obviously satisfied. Snider says frequent overfeeding can lead to an overweight baby.

Store breast milk properly

NEWARK, DE – There are many reasons a mother may want to express her breast milk to feed her infant at a later time. She may have work hours that cause her to miss scheduled feedings. Or an occasional meeting may conflict with feeding time. She may just need a break from the constant demands of her infant. But whatever the reason, she should store the expressed milk properly to ensure adequate nutrition for her baby.

"Folic acid, a B vitamin essential to the body's use of protein and the formation of blood and genetic material, is perishable under certain conditions," says Dr. Sue Snider, University of Delaware extension food and nutrition specialist.

Snider says recent studies indicate that breast milk stored in the refrigerator for 24 hours or less provides the recommended daily allowances (RDA) of both folic acid and vitamin C for infants up to 6 months old. Even after three months of storage in the freezer, vitamin C levels are adequate for infants. But after only one month of freezer storage the level of folic acid drops below the RDA for infants.

Other research shows that human milk keeps best when stored in the back of the freezer rather than in the freezer door.

"Feeding infants human milk from a bottle can be a great convenience," says Snider. "But if frozen or stored milk is fed frequently, take care that the storage time and conditions don't affect the nutritional quality of the milk."

Baby's development determines when to introduce solids

NEWARK, DE – Parents often wonder when to start feeding their babies solid foods, and what these first foods should be.

Babies vary in their growth, development and readiness for different foods," says Dr. Sue Snider, University of Delaware extension food and nutrition specialist. "It's always wise to check with your pediatrician about special nutritional needs, but there are some general guidelines to follow.

"Babies used to be given solids before they were a month old," says the specialist. "But we now know that this frequently causes allergic reactions. In addition, an infant's suck-and-swallow reflex makes it difficult to actually eat much solid food at an early age. This reflex begins to disappear between four and six months of age, coinciding with a baby's increased growth and development which requires more nutrients than can be supplied by breast milk or formula alone. So at about this age, other foods are introduced."

Iron-fortified cereals are the first solid foods introduced in the diet because a baby's increasing need for iron can't be met by milk. Snider says these cereals are usually non-wheat to guard against possible allergic reactions. When a baby is six or seven months old, strained vegetables and fruit juices are added, says the specialist. Strained fruits and strained meats are usually included at about eight or nine months.

"Introduced solids in small amounts," recommends Snider, "starting with one teaspoon per day of a new food. And try only one new food at a time to make sure your baby isn't allergic to it. Check

Dance to the music.

Recently, a portion of our extended family enjoyed a Saturday evening out to dinner. The food was great, the laughter hearty, and the time together was most enjoyable. An additional highlight to the evening was the strolling "minstrel" with a folk guitar who was adept at playing requests. Our heartfelt applause was followed by the comment, "Our family really enjoys music!"

What happens during childhood that inspires one to enjoy music? How do families encourage the development of this form of enjoyment? We do know that throughout childhood, music is a potent and very physical force.

A rock'n'roll song often naturally sends baby in motion. Toddler, though not notable for keeping time to the beat, will happily clap, rock or sway when listening to music. As children approach age three, we begin to see something that looks more like dancing and moving roughly in time with the music.

Parents can play an important role in a child's enjoyment and exploration of music. Here are some good ideas to get you started.

Share the music you enjoy with your child. Don't feel that all the music you share with your child to be "children's music." Play what you like, whether it's classical, rock, country or disco. Watching adults enjoying music is the best initiation children have. I know that one of my favorite things was singing along while my mother played the piano, or singing to records. Often the stereo was our wake-up call, and on Sunday morning we would rise and shine to "Marcy's" recording of the song "Wake up, wake up you sleepy head!...it's time for Sunday School."

Encourage children to explore what they can do with their bodies and the different ways they move to the beat. Suppose you are listening to a lively song. Add some body movements of stepping, sliding, skipping, bouncing, or stretching. Children enjoy this activity and learn naturally to pick up the rhythm.

As you listen to music, help your child to tune in. Discuss the mood, rhythm, tempo, volume, and other elements. Try to name the instruments. By pointing these things out to your child, you can increase their awareness and enjoyment. An easy way to experience this is to have your child march to the music. As the tempo changes, marching speed will change as well.

Provide your children with props for musical instruments. Try blocks of wood or sticks to tap together, sand paper blocks, bels, tambourines or drums. Whether bought or improvised from household objects, these instruments add an extra element to children's pleasure in rhythmic movement.

Evaluate the need for formal lessons. The age is not as important as the fact that the lessons are something that the child enjoys. And a little guidance and encouragement will probably be needed somewhere during the weeks of lessons. I've been grateful on many occasions that my parents continued to encourage me through my piano lessons. There were periods of time of hating to practice and dreading the lessons. What I didn't realize at that time was how valuable music would become to me. Playing the piano has been a way to relax and unwind, a creative outlet, and a real source of personal pleasure.

I believe that parents, by showing their own natural enjoyment of music, can give their children a gift of appreciation and encouragement that will last a lifetime. Few things are more infectious than the joy of music. I'm thankful for my musical upbringing. Who would have known that I would marry a music major and inherit another musical family.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

To laugh or to cry. That is the question. (With apologies to Shakespeare.)

This all began with a newsletter from a local organization, relating the need for volunteers and fund raising. Among the countless charitable groups, this particular one, at least to me, represents a critical need of communities and is most deserving.

And the sentence that sent me into this emotional mix was this: "All we ask is for several hours a month to help with our various projects."

I wish. How I wish there were just a couple of more hours in the month to offer.

"Calves, would you consider giving up eating an evening a week or so?" I asked the occupants of the nursery.

Twelve simultaneous bawling moos replied negatively to the suggestion, while the newest was too busy wriggling to her feet to answer, and the ornery weanling in the corner grabbed her water bucket by the edge and sent the contents over my foot.

So much for that department.

Across the way in the old barn are Hulk and Bulk. Understand that these are descriptive titles for these 4-H heifers, not their official names.

"Hey, you two, how about fasting an evening a week. It would do your figures wonders," I suggested.

Hulk shot her tongue out to affectionately lick my cheek, the equivalent of being massaged with damp sandpaper. She then wrapped up the conversation with a blasting bawl in my ear, the decibel level of acid rock turned on full speaker sound.

No cooperation for a couple of hours off from here, either.

Shall we try at the house? I ponder the thought, as I remove dusty sweaters and damp boots. Three soggy towels and a dirty sweatshirt fly down to the towering laundry stack from the bathroom drop, and four cruddy pairs of barn jeans wrap around my ankles to beg for a wash job.

The question never gets asked. It's buried instead under crisis pleas like "What's for supper?" — "Did you wash my gym suit?" — "Can you take me to 4-H?" — and "I need the car . . . bye."

No time to be spared here, for sure.

One look at the office leveled a final blow. Stacks of paper, checkbooks, record books, letters, notes, messages, bills and general miscellaneous stuff to sort. In the midst wait the telephone and the typewriter. In frantic moments of frustration I have threatened to strangle one with the cord from the other, rendering both useless. Visions of repair bills have thus far kept that maniacurge under wraps.

There just is no more time.

And our schedules are surely not unique. Such busy demands are repeated in households — farm and non-farm — across the country, as fathers, mothers, and children pound a frantic pace trying to respond to the demands of today.

A quote from University of Nebraska stress specialist Robert Eliot seems especially appropriate: "A woman is often expected to act like a lady, care like a mother, think like a man and work like a dog. It's too much for many of them."

And not just women. Men — and our young people — are under the same demands.

Sometimes there can be only one answer to one more request.

"No" gets easier to say with practice.

with your pediatrician if you notice allergic reactions such as a skin rash or diarrhea."

Take care to prepare baby food in a sanitary manner. Some parents like to feed their infants homemade foods. Snider cautions that appliances or utensils used to blend or mash the food to an appropriate texture must be clean to guard against contamination. She also advises parents to remove the baby's portion before salting the rest of the food.

"Salt added to family food is not tolerated by infants and may lead to kidney damage," she says. "Parents may prefer to use commercial baby foods. These contain no salt and are relatively inexpensive."

Commercial baby foods may be dehydrated or in ready-to-eat form in jars. The advantage of the dehydrated form is that only the amount a baby will eat needs to be prepared. If using food from a jar, heat only the amount that you think your baby will consume. The rest should be refrigerated immediately in its original container. Uneated food in a baby's dish should be discarded. It may be contaminated with bacteria, or saliva from the baby's mouth can cause the product to break down.

Babies will accept most foods, including strong-flavored vegetables such as turnips, broccoli and cauliflower, says Snider. But if your baby refuses a new food, don't insist. Try again a few days later. "Babies shouldn't be forced to eat," she says. "They generally know when they're hungry."

The specialist also cautions against feeding young infants honey. Bacterial spores found in honey can grow in an infant's gastrointestinal tract and cause botulism-an illness that has been associated with sudden infant death syndrome. However, after babies are six or seven months old, they produce enough stomach acid to destroy the spores of this organism.

Extension safety specialist develops training program to save lives

UNIVERSITY PARK – One of the root causes of multiple farm deaths is good-intentioned bystanders who plunge in without knowing how to help a farm accident victim, says a Penn State farm safey expert

Farming is the second-most hazardous industry in the nation partly because of the number of these multiple deaths, he adds

But Dennis Murphy, associate professor of agricultural engineering, has developed a specialized training program which he hopes will help eliminate death due to lack of knowledge

Says Murphy, "If a farmer falls into his manure pit, do you enter the below-ground storage area after him to help him get out? Or do you first call a rescue squad?

If you want to commit suicide, you'll go in after him If you want to save him and yourself, you'll call for help and then set up fans to ventilate some of the lethal hydrogen sulfide gas" A few breaths of a high concentration of the gas can kill

Murphy has turned 10 years of experience in farm safety procedures into the formal training program that he is now taking on the road throughout Pennsylvania He says he will provide information to farmers and, more importantly, to their families, on how to be the most help at the scene of an accident

Victims of farm accidents are most often discovered by a family member or a neighbor," he says Their first few minutes of reaction may make the difference between life and death "

This course isn't going to get anyone a Red Cross card," Murphy says But the "First on the scene" program can help its participants decide what to do if an accident does occur, particularly one that results in entrapment in or under machinery or farm storage structures

"I just want them to be able to make rational decisions when they discover an accident give them first-aid tips and help them know what to describe on the telephone," Murphy says

Farmstead hazards--tractors, animals, toxic gases and chemicals -- require a certain knowledge that "isn't necessarily pleasant to think about," Murphy says "So people don't, until it's too late "

Besides the specialized hazards, the very nature of farming as an isolated occupation, usually performed alone in rural, perhaps difficult-to-reach areas, all add up to make it number two on the nation's top three hazardous industries list, Murphy says

Only mining had more annual deaths last year, says the Penn State professor But miners and construction workers are working in such improved conditions that death rates in both industries have been lowered while agriculture remains a steady killer

Tractors are the number-one problem, says Murphy, followed by fatal machinery accidents, death by animals charging or trampling, drownings and less often, electocution, suffocation and falling at the workplace

But it is the tractor that most often kills, and often takes lives in two age groups not found in mining or construction statistics, Murphy points out Not uncommon on farms are youths and older people who unfortunately bear the brunt of the fatality statistics

Forty-three percent of all Pennsylvania farm accident deaths from 1980 to 1984 were almost evenly divided between kids aged 14 and under and elders 65 or older, he says

This information gives strong support to the notion that many elderly operators are placing themselves in positions of high risk when they operate a tractor," Murphy says, blaming old age for decreasing reaction time, physical strength and eyesight

The children who fall off tractors undoubtedly start out riding along for the fun of it Young children are run over by parents, grandparents and others who give in to pleas for just a little ride,'" Murphy says

That's why farming is so hazardous," Murphy says It exposes the whole family to potential situations "

It is the whole family he hopes to get at his sessions Because, he says, it just may be a son or daughter who ultimately saves his parent's life, as long as he or she knows how

Murphy begins offering 'First on the scene' in March, and says he is already booked through summer He will showcase the program at the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Safety Council on March 25 at the Penn State Sheraton in State College Contact the council at 220 Agricultural Engineering Building, University Park, Pa 16802 for more information or a registration brochure

Interest in wildlife has escalated into a national fascination during the past decade. According to a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service survey, more than 80 million Americans – one in every three – are wildlife watchers, and enjoy at least one residential activity such as photographing, feeding or maintaining plants for wildlife on a regular basis. And 12 5 million Americans cultivate plants specifically to attract wildlife.

Last year, some 10,000 viewers requested information after Craig Tufts, director of Nongame/Urban Wildlife for the National Wildlife Federation appeared on several segments of "Victory Garden," a half-hour syndicated garden series on PBS.

To meet this increasing demand for contact, with wildlife, the National Wildlife Federation and the Planting Council of Bedford, Mass., have jointly developed a "Garden for Wildlife" campaign which was launched recently at a news briefing held in New York City.

"The 'Garden for Wildlife' campaign is an educational and attractive way to convey the value of wildlife to everyone," said Dr. Jay D. Hair, executive vice president of the Federation. "People will have the opportunity to appreciate the beauty of animals in their natural environment, and know the value of helping restore a dwindling natural resource. They'll also learn how easy it is to make an attractive garden environment and how gratifying it is to watch birds and other animals make it their home."

The National Wildlife Federation has led and nurtured this rapidly growing trend since the national conservation group originated its Backyard Wildlife Habitat Program in 1973. The nationwide program encourages "backyard naturalists" to plant gardens with vegetation that attracts wildlife by providing food, water, protective cover and nesting areas for birds and other animals.

The Federation helps interested wildlife watchers create their own habitats with a comprehensive Gardening with Wildlife Kit, and gives special certification to those who apply for and meet the criteria for planning and maintaining well-kept habitat areas. About 3,700 individuals and groups have been certified in the program to date.

The Planting Council, a non-profit corporation composed of lawn and garden industry groups, hopes to generate a greater appreciation among consumers for the plants and landscape plans that benefit wildlife.

By providing thousands of retailers across the country with merchandising aids such as in-store signs, plant identification tags, posters and accurate information about garden planning and equipment, the Council will make the "Garden with Wildlife" message and materials widely available – and easily accessible – to the public. Eye-catching "Garden For Wildlife" logos will help consumers choose appropriate plants, feeders, watering devices and other equipment which will attract wildlife that live in their region of the country.

"People may not realize that the trees and plants they see every day are ideal for attracting wildlife," said Tufts, who spends much of his time educating people about the wildlife around them. "Dogwood, for example, is really a berry-bearing shrub that is particularly appealing to thrushes, bluebirds, catbirds and other migrating songbirds in the fall. Dense evergreens can provide excellent cover from winter winds and snow, and adding trumpet creeper or fuschia is a sure-fire way to attract hummingbirds."

Interest in planning wildlife habitat is not limited to homeowners. Public, corporate and recreational building projects are responding to this growing trend and many are now incorporating habitat landscape into their facilities. Even land developers are getting into the act.

On a recent trip to Tucson, Az., Tufts discovered that land developers and condominium building contractors were using habitat landscaping to help increase property values and attract buyers as well as wildlife.

The Federation's "Gardening With Wildlife Kit," which contains a 64-page book, "Plant An Oasis For Wildlife," sample landscape plans and planning tools, guides to attracting and identifying birds, and a Wildlife Gardener's Journal will be available March 31, 1986 for $16.95. For more information, call or write to: National Wildlife Federation, 1412 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C 20036; (703) 790-4000

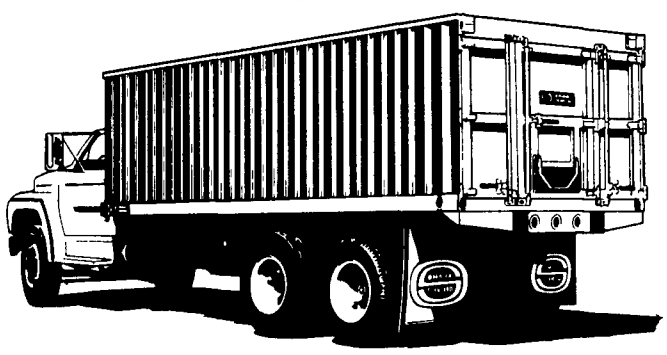
"CLEAN FLOW"
Aluminum Bodies



by OMAHA STANDARD

Backed by more than 60 years' experience in truck body manufacturing, this is the aluminum body that sets the standard for the industry. With 92¾ inches of unobstructed inside width, this rugged, lightweight body lets you haul more grain or bagged or palletized commodities and save fuel doing it.

With 60" or 72" high, vertically corrugated, splice-free sidewalls, three-piece full opening rear doors, swing-out header, trailer-type aluminum flooring and "I" beam cross members, this body's built for rugged field work and continuous road hauling.

"Clean Flow" design of the extra deep 30° sidewall corrugations allows complete emptying with no sharp corners for grain to hang up.

Conservation Reserve Program is boon to wildlife

COLLEGE PARK, Md.— Although you can't grow crops on land signed up under the Conservation Reserve Program, you can grow wildlife. In fact, increased habitat for both upland wildlife and waterfowl is one of the goals of the new program.

The Conservation Reserve Program, designed to retire highly erodible cropland, is an excellent opportunity for landowners to devote some land to wildlife habitat, says Anna Lynn, a biologist with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service. Sign up for the program is from March 3 to 14.

"Food supply is generally not a problem for most upland wildlife except during late winter months," explains Lynn. "Suitable cover is the critical factor that is missing in many areas for feeding, nesting, escape from predators and winter protection."

The best nesting areas for quail, rabbits, and pheasants, are grassy areas located next to a woody cover with a dense understory. The woody vegetation provides a safe haven from predators and harsh weather. This woody cover can be provided by woodlots, windbreaks, hedgerows, and clump planting of trees and shurbs. "So if you sign up 10 acres, you might want to plant nine acres of trees and one acre in a grassy border for wildlife.

Lynn recommends planting nesting cover in strips at least 50 feet wide to lessen the chances of foxes, dogs, cats, raccoons finding the nests.

Many of these practices including establishment of permanent grasses and legumes, tree planting, permanent wildlife habitat, and field windbreaks are eligible for 50 percent cost sharing under the Conservation Reserve Program.

Also eligible for cost sharing are shallow water areas for wildlife. "Waterfowl and other wetland wildlife also need undisturbed nesting, feeding, and resting habitat," Lynn says. Shallow ponds will provide good habitat if they meet the following critiera:

- At least 50 percent of the pond has a depth of three feet or less, with optimum shallow depths ranging from six to 18 inches to promote plant growth.
- For dabbling ducks, 50 to 75 percent of the pond should be shallow and vegetated with clumps of emergent or floating plants.
- Wildlife ponds may need a water control structure to allow manipulation of water levels.
- Ponds should have a 50- to 150-foot vegetated buffer strip around them to serve as a nesting area. Recommended plantings include alfalfa, clovers, timothy, orchardgrass and ryegrass.

In addition to the cost sharing available under the Conservation Reserve Program, the Maryland Forests, Parks, and Wildlife Service has announced it will make $20,000 in cost share funds available on a 50-50 basis for planting certain wildlife covers. Tax deductions for building ponds are available under the state's Waterfowl Restoration Program.

For more information about these programs, contact your local Soil Conservation Service office listed in the phone directory under U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Factors that determine seed quality

KALAMAZOO, MI - Germination, as reflected by the seeds' ability to produce a stand, is what farmers most readily associate with seed quality, according to Dr. Tony Kust, manager of quality assurance for Asgrow Seed Company However, genetic and physical purity, uniformity of seed size and shape and pathological properties all influence the quality of a bag of seed

"Genetic purity is always a major concern," Kust says Production departments do everything possible to ensure purity, including growing out samples of each kernel size of every lot to check for genetic off-types Sophisticated lab techniques are also used to check for purity by examining the genetic "fingerprint" of hybrid seed

"Physical purity–freedom from foreign material, cracked seed, weed seed and other crop seed is a quality factor every farmer has the right to expect," Kust observes "With the technology available in today's modern seen plants, contaminated seed should be a thing of the past "

Some of the same equipment used to clean the seed helps insure uniformity of seed size and shape, quality factors which are essential to planting accuracy, especially with plate planters, Kust explains "Underplanting due to improper sizing is potentially as serious to the producer as low germination rates," he says "Likewise, overplanting may induce stress and cause excessive barreness It is also a waste of seed "

Finally, pathological quality is constantly monitored to detect the presence of seed-borne disease That is rarely a problem with hybrid seed corn, Kust acknowledges, but it cannot be overlooked

"Each of these factors is important to farmers because they can affect yields and profits, asserts Kust "At every stage of production, from the field to storage, samples are drawn, counts are made and quality is assessed to ensure that farmers are receiving the best seed possible "

Delmarva Poultry Industry kicks off fund drive

GEORGETOWN, Del. — David VanHoose, first vice president and fund drive chairman of Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), has announced that the goal for the 1986 DPI Fund Drive has been set at $330,000. Nearly 200 volunteer workers from communities throughout the Delmarva broiler area were in attendance at the recent kick-off meeting. DPI is the 4,000-member, non-profit trade association that represents all phases of the billion dollar poultry industry on the Delmarva Peninsula.

William V. Roth, Jr., Senior U.S. Senator from Delaware, was the featured speaker for the evening. Roth has been an avid supporter of the poultry industry and praised the poultrymen for their independence and positive attitudes, noting that they do not look for special benefits from government but just the opportunity to compete on equal terms.

VanHoose, who is general manager of Paramount Poultry/Cargill, Inc., reported a total of $174,615 in cash and pledges had been collected to date. These "investments" to DPI will be used for research, educational programs, legislative and promotional activities, all aimed at helping the continued progress of the broiler industry in the area. He thanked the workers for their interest and accomplishments to date, but noted there was much hard work ahead to reach the $330,000 goal by the final reporting date of March 27th.

USDA sets marketing quotas for Maryland, cigar filler tobaccos

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has issued 1986 national acreage allotments for Maryland (type 32) and cigar-filler (type 41) tobaccos of 25,898 acres and 7,786 acres, respectively, and marketing quotas for the 1986, 1987 and 1988 crops of these two kinds of tobaccos.

According to Milton Hertz, acting administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, tobacco growers actually grew 24,500 acres of Maryland tobacco and 8,000 acres of cigar-filler tobacco in 1985.

Hertz said growers referendums will be held Feb. 24-27 to see if growers want marketing quotas to be in effect for these tobaccos for the marketing years 1986, 1987 and 1988. Quotas were last proclaimed on these tobaccos for the 1983-85 crops, but were rejected by growers in February 1983

If growers vote in favor of the proclamation, quotas will be in effect for the next three crops and price supports will be available If quotas are disapproved, production will not be limited production and price supports will not be in effect.

Quotas last were in effect in 1965 for Maryland tobacco, grown in Maryland and Pennsylvania

Quotas have never been in effect for cigar-filler (type 41) tobacco, grown in Pennsylvania.

Notices showing the 1986 allotments for individual farms soon will be mailed to producers by local county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committees. The committees also will mail referendum ballots to all known eligible producers. Any producer who does not receive a ballot may obtain one from his local county ASCS office.

Plan conservation tillage practices now

If you expect to plant no-till or use some other conservation tillage method this spring, begin making plans now, said Duane Pysher, District Conservationist with USDA's Soil Conservation Service.

Conservation tillage saves time, fuel and soil. It conserves moisture and improves crop yields.

If you do not own a planter, the most important thing is to buy, lease, make arrangements for custom planting, or borrow a good planter, said Pysher. A wide variety of planters and drills are available and many local farm implement dealers have rented units

When selecting a planter, there are two important things to consider It must be heavy enough to cut through a previous crop's residue, and it should be equipped with a good set of coulters

Herbicide selection should also be planned early. Successful conservation tillage farmers say that next to a good planter, using the right kinds and amounts of herbicide is essential. With a few exceptions a contact herbicide should be used to kill existing vegetation when planting in an undisturbed seedbed

Also, one or more pre-emergence herbicides should be applied to control weeds and grasses as they sprout. Some contact and pre-emergence herbicides can be tank-mixed and applied in one operation According to Pysher, farmers should read manufacturers' labels and Extension Service bulletins for tank-mix rates and combinations

Because no-till planting may not be for every field on the farm, you should decide early which field to plant this way Problem fields, such as one that is wet, has a history of a grass problem or has more than 15 to 20 percent infestation of other hard-to-kill weeds, will need other conservation tillage practices

Gett off to a good start this spring by planning for conservation tillage now! Guidance is available from the Soil Conservation Service Office or the Cooperative Extension Office in your county

Penn State rediscovers agriculture's history

UNIVERSITY PARK — At the turn of the century, Dr. Henry P. Armsby believed that if the net energy in animal feed could be precisely measured, better feed varieties could be developed to increase production of meat or milk. To make these measurements, he built the first large respiration calorimeter in the nation in 1902 at Penn State's University Park Campus.

For the next 20 years, Dr. Armsby, Penn State's first dean of agriculture and director of the Agricultural Experiment Station, quantified the energy metabolism of large animals.

The records of his experiments lay nearly forgotten in the attic of the long-unused Calorimeter Building until recently. Dr. Michael Bezilla, research historian in the College of Agriculture, rediscovered them while researching the history of agriculture at the University.

Bezilla and Leon J. Stout, associaate librarian and University archivist, rescued four to five filing cabinets filled with calorimeter records from the silverfish-infested attic and moved them to the library, where they eventually will be available to researchers through the Penn State Room in Pattee Library.

Extension Record Uncovered

In the course of his research, Dr. Bezilla made use of another overlooked but even more extensive collection of records stored in the attic of Armsby Building. These records constitute a comprehensive documentation of the agricultural and home economics extension service from the time the first county agents were appointed in 1912. Totaling 145 cartons (180 cubic feet), this material was transferred to the Library Annex and likewise will be available through the Penn State Room.

"The collection is extremely valuable," Mr. Stout says, "The materials provide an agricultural history of Pennsylvania. The cooperative Extension records enable us to look at any county and see what has happened there since the early 1900's."

The collection is composed of the annual reports of county and home economics extension agents and University central office records, such as annual reports, financial reports, publicity files, correspondence, plans of work, lantern slides, newspaper clippings and reports of extension specialists.

There is extensive information on how extension agents functioned, what problems farmers faced, what resources were available, the nature and yields of agricultural production and the effects of such innovations as rural electrification. There also is data on the work of home economists in food preservation, child care, nutrition education and similar subjects.

Oral Histories

The collection contains oral histories from about 30 retired extension agents, which were recorded in the mid-1070s. Dr. Bezilla has been using these audiotapes in his research and writings.

"A comparable collection of extension materials at Michigan State is among the most heavily used of that university's records," Mr. Stout says. "Our collection, which is even more comprehensive, will be of interest to many researchers."

As these materials are organized and catalogued, they will be added to the University Libraries' computerized Library Information Access System (LIAS), making them available to users of national bibliographic databases such as RLIN and OCLC, Mr. Stout notes.

The college of Agriculture recognized the historical significance of these records and cooperated fully in preserving them and making them more accessible for scholarly research, Dr. Bezilla says.

"Because of U.S. Department of Agriculture regulations, extension agents and specialists have always spent a lot of time putting ink to paper," he says. The 30-year administration of Milton S. McDowell, director of agricultural extension, is chronicled in the records. He was one of the most well known and influential extension figures nationally, making these recently discovered records doubly important, Dr. Bezilla says.

Dauphin Conservation District offers seedlings

HARRISBURG — To insure that Pennsylvania's abundant forestlands remain perpetual, numerous groups are promoting tree planting during 1986, the "Year of the Forest." For the 12th year the Dauphin County Conservation District is offering area residents the opportunity to purchase inexpensive planting stock during its annual seedling sale

These bareroot seedlings range in size and age from 6-18 inches for the three and four-year-old evergreens and 12-30 inches for the one and two-year-old hardwoods The cost for a bundle of 10 evergreens is $4, and the hardwoods sell for $1 each. Coniferous species available are douglas fir, blue spruce, scotch pine and white pine Deciduous species available are· white flowering dogwood, American redbud, Chinese chestnut, Russian olive and American sycamore, Dauphin County's official tree For the first time, both crownvetch plants and seed are offered. Crownvetch is an excellent ground cover to plant in areas to prevent soil erosion

Seedlings must be purchased by placing a prepaid order Individuals interested can call the 24 hour "EVERGREEN LINE" at 558-1092 or write to the Dauphin County Conservation District, 1205 South 28th Street, Harrisburg, PA 17111-1095 to request an order form The deadline to order seedlings is March 26, 1986

Orders will be available for pick-up on Thursday, April 17, from 5 to 8 pm

No need to rely on others to pick your rocks — just hook up your Front End Rock Picker anytime and do the work of 8-10 men

When you are finished just pull the pins or release your QUICK-TACH and set the rock picking assembly aside until you need it again

Picture below shows raking rocks in a river bed — this is a more difficult operation than average as rocks are under rocks.

THE QUALITY AND PRICES ARE RIGHT!

The 254 4-wheel drive and a spring-tooth harrow make an excellent team for thorough, close cultivation of corn, soybeans, vegetables and other row crops.

CASE INTERNATIONAL 254:
economical, down-to-earth productivity that offers great job versatility

Though compact in size, the International 254 diesel has many of the features and benefits you'd expect to find on a much larger agricultural tractor It's near perfect as a chore workhorse on a big farm, or as the prime mover for small-acreage, part-time or truck farms

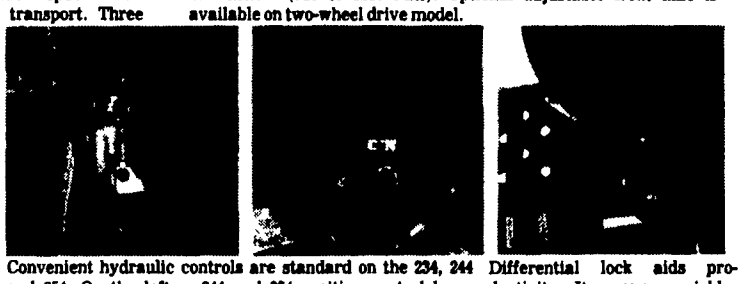
Cover more acres for less. The 3-cylinder, 4-cycle diesel engine develops 21 (15 7 kW) PTO horsepower* A simple, yet highly efficient and reliable injection system and a piston displacement of 64.75 cubic inches (1.06 L) work to produce remarkable lugging ability. If you need even more traction, choose the 4-wheel drive model of the 254. Either way, you get fuel saving economy you can bank on.

Nine well-spaced working speeds give you an ideal speed that's right for almost any operation including road transport. Three reverse speeds provide a good selection for fast cycling. Standard safety start system prevents starting the tractor with the transmission in gear. For shift-on-the-go convenience, a nine-speed synchronized transmission is available This transmission also offers the advantage of live 540 RPM PTO as well as a 1250 RPM PTO for mid-mounted mowers.

Reliable hydraulic 3-point hitch with outside stabilizer lets you hook up to Category I mounted or semi-mounted equipment You can take full advantage of the efficiency of integrally mounted equipment The hitch is powered by full-time, live hydraulics — standard on all 200 Series tractors Hydraulic power is supplied by a gear-type pump whenever the engine is running

Hydraulic draft control is available as an option on 244 and 254 models. It automatically senses changes in draft load and adjusts implement depth accordingly

Fit your 254 to many row crop widths or reduce its overall width for work in confined areas. Rear wheels tread adjusts from 36.2 to 48.0 inches (920 to 1220 mm). Optional adjustable front axle is available on two-wheel drive model.



Convenient hydraulic controls are standard on the 234, 244 and 254. On the left, a 244 and 254 position control lever raises or lowers 3-point hitch equipment. The 234 has a return to neutral valve. On the right, a flow control knob regulates lowering speed of implements.

Differential lock aids productivity It engages quickly. Once the trouble spot is passed, it can be easily disengaged.

* Manufacturer's estimate

reliable power for small-scale farming

The International 284 is the compact brute you need to tackle the really tough small jobs It has big diesel power and is available in a 4-wheel drive model in case you need added traction and extra mobility to get in and out of soft areas

Krause Plow Company pioneered the Rockflex™ disc, the Flexwing™ disc, the Landsman™ conservation tillage machine. Now they have introduced the Landsaver™ coulter chisel plow. The Landsaver™ combines excellent trash cutting characteristics with superior trash clearance. You can now chisel in the worst conditions without plugging the plow. NEW Spring Reset Clamps provide extra clearance.

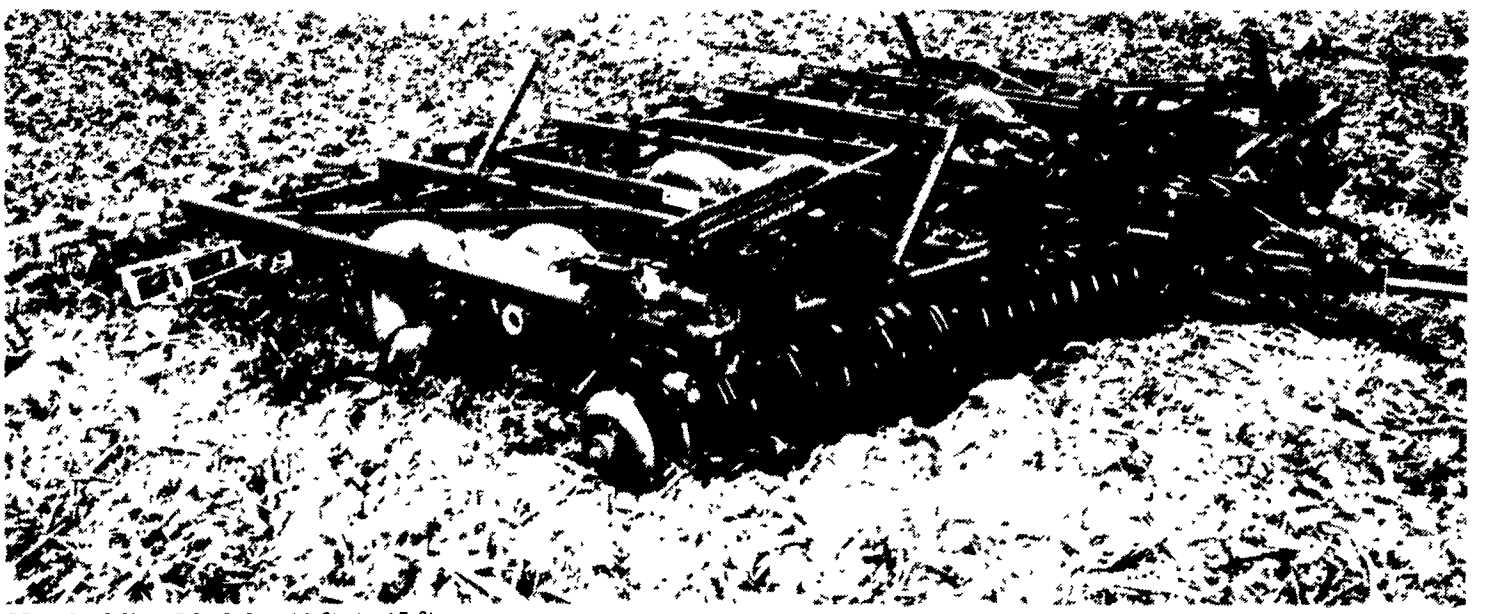
THE LANDSMAN

by Krause

An Implement That Can Cut Time And Labor Costs By 50%



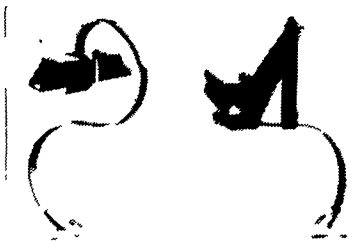
Non-Folding Models - 12 ft. to 15 ft.

Folding Flex Wing Models - 18 ft. to 36 ft.

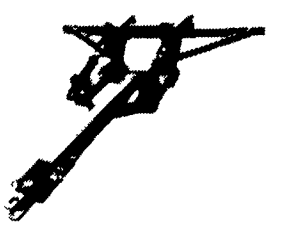
Preparing a seedbed used to take a lot of time, a lot of fuel, and a lot of money.

But now there's a smarter way to get the job done — with a Krause Landsman. It's a unique tillage implement that discs, incorporates chemicals (either deep or shallow), cultivates, and finishes all at once — to prepare your seedbeds with just one pass.

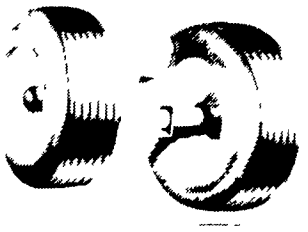
Built with heavy-duty features like these:



Choice of two cultivator shanks, both offering 25" of clearance under frame... Spring-cushioned shanks have rear-mounted shock and come with 10" sweeps. Heavy-duty "K-Tine™" shanks feature a high point load to keep sweeps level and still provide aggressive mixing action.



Massive hitch is an extra-heavy design, proven on Krause disc harrows. It is spring-cushioned to reduce frame stress on uneven ground — a feature most competitors don't offer. Built from heavy 4"x6" steel tubing.



Walking tandem wheels flex over obstacles individually and follow contour of the land for uniform working depth. Staggered only 18" so you can make tight turns without harmful side loading. Regreaseable bearings.

John Deere 575 Loader

...with vertical path boom. A leap ahead in loader logic.

No boom arch! Vertical path boom gives up to 30 percent more forward reach for excellent truck loading. These skid-steers also have 30 percent more lift capacity per pound of weight.

And they run the ground well. With low center of gravity, low profile and long wheelbase for stability... shorter overall length and narrower width for maneuverability. 33-hp diesel engine.

Call us for a free demonstration.

Keystone Cattle Service has winning day in Houston

BY JACK HUBLEY

LITITZ — A Pennsylvania cattleman left his mark in the Lone Star State last month by setting what may well be an all-time record at the 17th National Charolais Show held in Houston, Texas, on Feb. 20.

Trailering 13 Charolais to the event, Cliff Orley, of the Lebanon-based Keystone Cattle Service, showed six champions and took top honors in seven classes. Titles earned by Orley's show string included both the reserve grand champion bull and female, as well as the junior heifer calf champion.

This year's show found 90 females and 66 bulls competing for top national honors. The show's two-man judging team consisted of Dr. David Hawkins of Michigan State University and Iowa breeder Larry Reifschneider.

The show's reserve grand champion bull was Roxy's Jack Dempsey 63R, a CCC Elevations Knockout son owned by Roxy Ranching Co. and Soderglen Farms, both of Alberta, Can. Last year Willard Walker of Arkansas paid $170,000 for the semen rights to this bull.

A Jack Dempsey daughter named White Line Jackie-O, and also owned by Walker and Soderglen won the junior heifer calf championship.

Orley also showed the reserve grand champion female, Cardinals Tiara R594, a Cardinals Rommel R460 daughter that was the show's reserve senior champion. Bred by Cardinal Farms of Hubbard, Iowa, she is owned by Perfection Charolais of Warsaw, Ind.

Keystone Cattle Service scored with a Pennsylvania heifer, as well. Bred and owned by Walter Heistand of Spring Meadows Ranch, Manheim, a May 1985 heifer named SMR Sasha 3025 won the late spring heifer calf class. This female's return to the Keystone State was assured after she was purchased at the National Charolais Sale by Paul Miller and family of Spring Grove. The final bid was $10,500.

Held on Feb. 21, the sale averaged $5,031, with a Jack Dempsey-sired embryo topping the bidding at $22,500.

"This is the best we've ever done at a national show," said Orley, after chalking up what may have been the most championship wins by a single show string in the event's history.

Topping the bull show was Immortal, the May 1983, ABC Iceman 811 son owned by Windy Hills Ranch, Commerce, Ga., and Bermidkin Farms of Wagener, S.C.

The show's grand champion female was ACF Avette 504, a May 1984 daughter of ACF Apocalypse 40. She is owned by Adams Charolais Farms of Springfield, Ohio.

Poultry House Lighting Programs

Light intensity and the length of the dailylight period are important considerations for the poultry producer because they can influence electrical costs and bird performance. Housing type and the purpose for which the poultry are being grown must be considered in developing a practical lighting program.

The normal lighting program for meat birds (broilers and turkeys) provides continuous light on low intensity. Intermittent lighting programs have been developed to conserve electrical energy and perhaps result in more efficient nutrient utilization.

BROILERS

1. Continuous light. Provide 2 to 3 foot-candle of continuous light over the brood area for the first week. Gradually dim light intensity to ½ foot-candle at feeder level by the third week. Maintain continuous light until market age.

2. Intermittent light. Provide 2 to 3 foot-candle of continuous light over the brood area for the first week. Initiate the intermittent light program (2 hours of light followed by 2 hours of darkness) during the second week. Gradually dim light intensity to ½ foot-candle at feeder level by the third week.

TURKEYS

1. Continuous light. Place poults on 24-hour light at 5 to 8 foot-candles of light for first 2 weeks. From 2 to 4 weeks of age, gradually reduce light intensity at approximately 1 foot-candle at feeder level.

2. Intermittent light. Place poults on continuous light at 5 to 8 foot-candles of light for first 2 weeks. From 2 to 4 weeks of age, gradually reduce light intensity to 1 foot-candle at feeder level. Initiate intermittent lighting (2 hours on, 2 hours off) during the third week. At 16 weeks of age increase light intensity to 5 to 8 foot-candles. Continue intermittent lighting until birds are marketed.

The performance from the intermittent programs is usually equal to or slightly superior to continuous light but requires more feeder and waterer space.

It is generally accepted that a photoperiod of 12 hours or more is stimulatory for egg production. Replacement pullets should be grown on a non-stimulatory photoperiod (duration of light less than 12 hours) and brought into egg production by exposure to a daylength in excess of 12 hours. Suggested lighting programs are as follows:

REPLACEMENT PULLETS

1. Light-tight housing. Use 24-hour lights for first 3 days, then place pullets on 6 to 8 hours constant light until 18 weeks of age. At 18 weeks of age, increase daylength to 10 hours and increase 15 minutes per week until desired laying-house day length is attained. Light intensity at lower feeder level should be ½ to 1 foot-candle.

2. Housing not light-tight. Use 24-hour lights for first 3 days. Rear April through July hatches under natural daylength only; use step-down lighting program for August through March hatches. Initial daylength is determined by adding 5 hours to the natural length of day expected when birds reach 20 weeks of age. During the developing period, the day length is decreased 15 minutes each week so that at 20 weeks it will equal natural daylength. At 20 weeks put pullets on a 14 hour day; if natural daylength is longer, keep them on that amount. Light intensity at lower feeder level should be ½ to 1 foot-candle.

Designing lighting programs for replacement pullets in nonlight-tight structures can be described as making the best of a bad situation. This is especially true for August through March hatches. These pullets will be grown on a daylength in excess of 12 hours.

Lighting programs for layers in nonlight-tight buildings present no major difficulty.

LAYERS

1. Light-tight housing. Use artificial light to give a 14-hour day, or provide layers with an on-off schedule of 8 hours on, 10 hours off, 2 hours on, and 4 hours off. Maintain a minimum intensity of ½ foot-candle at the lower feeder level. Do not decrease the length of the light period when flocks are in production.

2. Housing not light-tight. Use artificial light in the laying house to give a 14-hour day, or the longest period of natural daylight if longer than 14 hours. Maintain a minimum intensity of ½ foot-candle at lower feeder level. Do not decrease the length of light period when flocks are in production.

The different spectrum colors as measured by wavelengths, have been shown to influence the performance of chickens and turkeys. It is generally concluded that the longer wavelengths, those toward the red end of the light spectrum, are preferred for poultry house illumination.

Growers will 'see the light' at turkey conference

GETTYSBURG — Turkey growers who light their houses with conventional incandescent bulbs may be spending 50 percent more than necessary for lighting, according to Round Hill Foods' live production manager, Steve Jones.

Jones' conclusion is based on research that his company has completed on "PL" flourscent lights that adapt to incandescent sockets. About 50 percent of a turkey house's electricity requirements go into lighting, while the remaining half goes to operate fuel systems, says Jones. By substituting 13-watt PL flourescent bulbs for the 100-watt incandescent bulbs previously in use, Round Hill saved enough electricity to pay for the new system in one year.

Round Hill serviceman Dave Boyer plans to go into more detail on the company's money-saving light system at the Penn State Turkey Conference next Thursday at Gettysburg's Sheraton Inn.

The turkey talk gets under way at 9:30 a.m., with a discussion of nutrient deficiencies by Dr. Norm Magruder of Cargill, Inc. With avian influenza surfacing once again in Pennsylvania turkey flocks, New Bolton Center's Dr. Sherrill Davison will provide an avian flu update. Other speakers and topics are scheduled for the conference, which will conclude at 2:45 p.m.

Those interested in attending the conference should contact Adams County Extension agent William Murray at 717-334-6271. Following is a schedule of the day's events.

Calving Season Management

Beef cow/calf operators are currently full swing into the calving season in Pennsylvania and adjoining states. Calving season is most enjoyable to many producers . . . that is if all goes well! In recent days, I've talked with many small herd owners who had questions regarding problems experienced during the calving season. Perhaps a short refresher course on calving season management is in order.

My biggest concern is always the bred heifers, especially if they carry the service of a bull with unknown calving ease data. Keep in mind that first-calf heifers are apt to experience some calving difficulty, and you certainly don't help matters by overfeeding, underfeeding, or using bulls with known progeny calving difficulty. These heifers should be observed very closely throughout calving season and if you used artificial insemination, you have a good idea of estimated calving time. Veterinarians tell me that bred heifers that go 4 to 5 days past their due date should be examined to insure that everything is progressing satisfactorily.

If a cow has labored for 2 hours with no measurable progress, she should be entered and checked for a possible abnormal delivery. The most commonly observed abnormalities include: 1) too large a calf, 2) backwards calf, 3) leg or head back, 4) twins Do not hesitate to call a veterinarian if it appears to be a serious problem that you cannot handle yourself

If a cow had extreme difficulty calving, it may be advisable to have a veterinarian examine her prior to breeding season for uterine infection.

Following are several practices that may be performed on newborn calves. Exactly which ones are adopted depends upon each individual situation. Consult your veterinarian for advice.

1) Dip navel cord in 7 percent iodine to prevent infections.

2) Make sure calf gets a full of colostrum milk in the first 1 to 4 hours of life. Colostrum is needed for resistance to calfhood diseases.

3) Ear tag and/or tatoo for identification.

4) Optional injection of 2 cc vitamin A & D

5) Scours vaccination if needed.

6) Selenium — vitamin E injection if white muscle disease is an area problem.

7) Weigh calf for performance records.

8) Castration (optional)

9) Dehorn with caustic paste (optional)

10) Keep calf away from cold drafts.

Baby calves are very susceptible to scours and pneumonia during the first few weeks following birth As the calf grows older, it becomes more resistant to scours infection A commonly recommended solution for oral treatment of dehydrated calves due to scours is 1 level tablespoon of baking soda and 100 cc of 50 percent dextrose solution mixed in a quart of water A convenient means of oral administration is through an oral calf feeder.

Time spent to save calves during the calving season is time well spent!

Shorthorns maintain NY Bull Test lead

ITHACA, NY—For the 87 members of the New York Bull Test's "Class of '86" mid-point in the 140 day performance testing program has come and gone. The reports for the third weigh period have been announced and are being studied to see who the "class" leaders are and who could be the top "graduates" when the test program ends with the May 2 Bull Test Sale.

William Greene, Bull Test director and livestock extension associate at Cornell University, reports the average daily gain for all the bulls for the third weigh period was 3.83 pounds and the overall average daily gain for the 1985-86 test to date is 4.05 pounds.

The two Shorthorn bulls continue to lead with the highest breed average for the third period, 4.39 pounds. One of these Shorthorn bulls, a Stony Brook Farms of Locke consignment is breed leader with an average daily gain of 5.14 pounds for the period. The Salers bull, a Cel-O-Lok Farm of Locke consignment, is second in breed standing with a third period average daily gain of 4.36 pounds.

The 22 Simmentals ranked third in breed standing with an average daily gain of 4.34 pounds.

A Polled Hereford bull consigned by Stone Ridge Farms of Livingston Manor has taken over the class leadership with a third period average daily gain of 7.14 pounds. A Wheatly Farms of Stanfordville Simmental bull leads his breed and is runner-up for top test honors for the period with an average daily gain of 6.29 pounds.

Those bulls who meet strict certification standards for rate of gain, frame score, breeding and structural soundness will be eligible for the May 2 Bull Test Sale at the Livestock Pavilion on the Cornell campus. Greene said he expects 45-50 bulls to be entered in the sale.

Meat packer agrees to civil penalty

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Crissman, Inc., a meat packer at Castanea, and its president, Jack G. Crissman, have agreed to a $30,000 civil penalty and a cease and desist order from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

A USDA official said Crissman agreed to the penalties to settle federal administrative charges of failing to pay for $421,736 worth of meat purchased from Arbogast & Bastian, Inc., of Allentown during 1984.

B. H. (Bill) Jones, head of USDA's Packers and Stockyards Administration, said litigation is still in process for three other meat packers and their officers who are charged with failing to pay for about $4 million worth of meat purchased from Arbogast & Bastian, Inc. in 1984.

The remaining respondents are: Pork Cutter, Inc., of New York, N.Y., and its officers Don and Marge Birakowsky; Rotches Pork Packers, Inc., of Brooklyn, N.Y., and its president, David A. Rotches; and Otto Doerrer and Son, Inc., of Rye, N.Y., and its officers, Rudolfo Panigrosso and Gene Lombardo.

In agreeing to the penalties, Crissman and the firm neither admitted nor denied the charges filed by USDA under authority of the Packers and Stockyards (P&S) Act.

Choosing the right cutter for your field

NEW HOLLAND – New disc-type cutters solve a lot of mowing problems, but they're not replacing the sickle bar cutting of the conventional Haybine® mower-conditioner, according to Joe Weicksel of New Holland. Both kinds of machines excell in particular situations. The best choice of any hay producer depends on his crops, location and needs.

There's nothing to beat the conventional sickle bar in standing alfalfa, says Weicksel. Haybine mower-conditioners provide non-stop mowing in a wide variety of yields and field conditions. But there are places where a standard sickle may have problems.

Fire ant mounds often found in the southeastern states present a problem because the sickle is in the dirt and mud as you cut through the mound. Plugging can result. A disc mower whistles right through.

Another situation that sometimes bothers a sickle bar mower is a heavily fertilized crop of grass. Frequently, the stubble area will stay wet and slimy – even in mid afternoon, if it received more than a hundred pounds of nitrogen per acre. Yields will be high. This, too, can present difficulties for a standard sickle. Again, the disc-type mower spins on through.

While the disc mower is generally a non-stop cutter, it does have its limitations, says Weicksel. This isn't hard to understand when you think about how it works compared to a regular sickle bar. The sickle bar cuts like a scissors, with the sickle blade slicing across the guard's ledger plate. The disc mower doesn't have a ledger plate. That's the reason it can't plug. Instead, it cuts more like a hand-held sickle. You can cut grass and weeds with a sickle if the material is stiff enough so that the sickle blade slices through it instead of just bending it over. When the grass is too soft, it's hard to cut with a sickle or scythe.

Something like that can occur with a disc-type cutter, explains Weicksel. In a very sparse alfalfa crop, you could get a streaky stubble. This is partly due to the air blast produced by the fast-rotating discs. The air blast bends the crop over, away from the direction of travel. And if there's not enough crop there to stand up, you may get uneven cutting. In this situation a regular sickle bar may have advantages.

The conventional sickle bar has the added advantage of lower cost, so it is generally more cost effective wherever the fire-ant problem or the soft, wet grass problems aren't expected at haying time.

By contrast, the disc cutter bar's ability to cut in very high-yield crops has to be seen to be believed, notes Weicksel, who is product manager for hay tools at New Holland. You can mow through 100 to 150 bale-per-acre trangled rye-vetch or other high-yield crops at about the speed a horse can gallop.

Probably for the first time, mowing speed is determined by your ability to stop in an emergency, not by the machine's cutting ability. You have to keep driving speeds slow enough to have control in case you unexpectedly encounter a rock or other obstruction. The Discbine® mower-conditioner cutter can ususally cut at a higher speed than you can safely drive.

Joe Weicksel of New Holland shows off the cutting parts of both kinds of mowers and mower-conditioners used for high-yield crops. Each has an advantage in particular circumstances. The disc cutter has the advantage in fire ant mounds that plug a conventional sickle.

Agway Crops meeting

Harold Mengel, Agway crops specialist, told local farmers about new Agway varieties at a special Crops Day program at the Country Table Restaurant in Mt. Joy.

McGarvey named head of PA Farm Equipment group

SEVEN SPRINGS – J. Lynn McGarvey of Reynoldsville, Jefferson County, was recently elected as President of the Pennsylvania Farm and Power Equipment Association at their annual conventional at Seven Springs.

McGarvey was born and reared during the depression, on a 180-acre farm in Clearfield County.

He entered the farm equipment business in 1958 by working for George Yount (a former PFPEA President) in Falls Creek, PA, an AC Dealer. That same year he bought Smith Brothers and it became McGarvey Farm Equipment. The state condemned his land for the new route 80 and he and his family moved to Reynoldsville, PA.

They operated their business out of a barn for one year and then erected a new 50 by 100 Snavely building in 1968. With a lot of help, the McGarveys were in their new building 60 days from start of construction.

The McGarvey Equipment Company is now incorporated with J. Lynn as President, Mrs. Carla McGarvey as Secretary & Treasurer, with son Dan as Financial Manager, Rick as Sales Manager and Jim and Tim in the shop. They operate out of a 60 x 200 steel building for show room, parts and offices. They have a 50 by 100 shop with twelve bays and 50 x 100 storage shed.

Franchises include Ford-New Holland, Kubota, New Idea & Temco replacement parts and numerous shortlines. They are situated in Jefferson County on 46 acres of land, 2 miles off exit 15, route 80, 6 miles east of Brookville, PA, 3 miles west of Reynoldsville, PA on US 322.

McGarvey will represent over 500 Equipment Dealer Members throughout PA during his year long duties.

Checkout new varieties, DEKALB advises

DEKALB, IL – Crop variety selection is extremely important to farmers. But, it is also a difficult and time-consuming project. Which variety you finally decide to purchase can mean the difference between a good or a great production year says Herb Brown, DEKALB-PFIZER GENETICS Regional Agronomist.

To help choose the best available products you can talk to neighbors, read company literature and yield information, "grill" your seed salesmen, and sometimes their company representatives.

"Having your own test plot information, based on resuts over 2 or 3 years, might make it easier to select those varieties that you are comfortable using on the majority of your acres," Brown adds. And, you can screen the hot, new ones or established leaders you haven't grown before by planting them in nest year's plot and on small acreage beside your current leaders."

To get the most benefit from your plot, Brown suggests several precautions. "Prepare a note-taking form before planting so you're ready to evaluate those characteristics important to you. Emergence, early growth, and plant population will be the first features to watch. Then note flowering date, stalk and root lodging, husk cover, plant height, ear or pod height, field shatter, grain quality and moisture, stay green, and soybean maturity date."

When taking notes, he cautions to spend time walking down the rows of each entry. "Standing at the end of each entry is quicker but you're cheating yourself," he says.

The number of entries shouldn't exceed the time you are prepared to spend planting, harvesting, and note taking according to the DEKALB-PFIZER official. "Plant no more than a dozen varieties if this is your first plot. Be sure to include the varieties you are planting on the rest of your farm."

Select a uniform plot site. "Bad data is worse than no data!" Brown states. "Be sure the same previous crop and tillage methods were used. These factors along have influenced yield resuts as much as 24 bushels."

"Careful, uniform application of fertlizer and chemicals, across the rows will make your plot more reliable," the agronomist adds.

Use a "tester" to minimize performance differences caused by variations in soil within the plot Brown advises. And, be sure border rows are on each side of the plot to minimize the effect of wind and sunlight on yield, standability, and harvest moisture.

Finally, don't over-rate the value of your plot. Data from a number of locations, over a 2-to-3-year period, is important Brown contends. "Continue talking to your neighbors, seed dealers, and company representatives to back up your opinions based on your plot. Obtain your state's yield trials as well as those of the companies you are considering doing business with." You may want to retest a variety that, based on your plot, you were ready to drop.

DEKALB adds ten hybrids

DEKALB, IL – Ten new products have met the rigorous testing and evaluation requirements demanded of all DEKALB-PFIZER GENETICS seed and are now being offered to growers. Included in these new releases are six corn hybrid and four soybean varieties.

Corn hybrids making their debut in 1986 are:

- DK397 - This widely adapted 89-day relative maturity hybrid features high yields, good stay-green, and high grain to stover ratio.
- DK 415 - A 91-day relative maturity hybrid with high yield potential, it offers strong defensive traits and excellent standability.
- DK 435 - A 93-day relative maturity hybrid, DK 435 has outstanding yields, good stress tolerance, very good seedling growth and excellent defensive characteristics.
- DK 547 - - Wide adaptation, excellent grain quality, good standability and high yields are features of this 104-day relative maturity hybrid.
- DK 572 - This 107-day relative maturity hybrid offers very high yields with excellent test weight, deep kernel grain, fast dry-down and good standability.
- DK 711 - A widely adapted 121-day relative maturity hybrid, DK 711 features outstanding yields, excellent standability, high test weight and excellent grain quality.

DEKALB-PFIZER's new soybean varieties are:

- CX096 - A late Group 0 variety, CX096 has good yields, standability, tolerance adn iron chlorosis, resistance to Phytophthora root rot races 1 and 2, and is adapted for northern conditions.
- CX 226 - This early Group II variety offers very high yield potential, good standability and is best adapted to Iowa, southern Minnesota and South Dakota.
- CX326 - An early Group III variety, CX 326 is widely adapted and offers excellent yields, very good standability, strong seedling vigor and multirace Phytophthora root rot resistance.
- CX366 - A medium/late Group III variety with outstanding yield potential, excellent standability and multirace Phytophthora root rot resistance, CX366 has shatter resistance and wide adaption.

According to Kent Schulze, DEKALB-PFIZER Senior Vice President, these new releases have clearly demonstrated in research plots and farmers' fields that they are superior to hybrids and varieties already on the market.

"DEKALB-PFIZER's product advancement process and controlled release policy are fundamental to our operating philosophy–we offer new products only after many long hours of discussion and evaluation of research and performance data," Schulze states. As defined by DEKALB-PFIZER, product evaluation is based on input from breeders, agronimists, sales managers, production personnel, seed dealers and the farmers themselves.

As such, the process is a lengthy one, beginning in December with product review meetings and ending with an announcement in late January of those products which pass the test. New products are released only after it has been determined that they meet rigorous yield and performance criteria.

"When we release a hybrid or variety, we expect it to be a top performer for many years," Schulze says. "Given the vast number of different environments where the new products have been evaluated, we are confident that they will perform as expected."

Manufacturers see slight drop in equipment sales this year

TUCSON, Ariz. – Farm equipment manufacturers in the United States are predicting a slight decline in dollar volume of retail sales in 1986 and only a slight improvement in 1987 for most product categories, according to a report issued from the annual Marketing and Management Conference of the Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute, meeting here today.

In a survey conducted among FIEI members in mid-December, companies reflected a median forecast that retail sales would be down about 2.5% for field equipment and that sales of farmstead equipment would remain about the same for 1986 as for 1985. The survey results were presented today in the State of the Industry report by James D. Gaeddert, vice president-sales of Hesston Corporation.

The forecast, which covers such major items as tractors, combines, tillage, hay and forage handling equipment, follows a year in which unit sales of basic field equipment tumbled an average of 6.5% under 1984 levels, and were down by more than 44% of 1979 unit sales. In 1985, unit sales of self-propelled combines were off 26.4%, balers (under 200 pounds), down 15.3%, forage harvesters, down 30.4%, and mower-conditioners, down 13.9% from the already depressed levels of 1984.

Farm wheel tractors were only off 1.8%, largely because the "under 40 hp" or small utility tractor category was up by more than 12% over the previous year.

"Some see the new farm bill as a boost to better sales and others see it as a deterrent because it takes so much acreage out of production," Gaeddert said. "Most everyone sees the next two years remaining about the same as 1985 because of the grain surplus, low commodity prices, weak export sales and dropping land values."

"Those optimistic about increasing sales, credit it to the need to replace aging and worn out equipment," he said. "The majority who see little or no change in shipments from factories attribute it to surplus inventory, bargains offered by dealers going out of business or from a glut of used equipment from farmers who have also gone out of business."

The grain surplus and need for additional storage capacity led manufacturers of grain bins, portable augers and elevators, and grain dryers to predict an increase in sales from 5% to 10% in 1986.

Gaeddert said that a majority of the manufacturers who responded to the questionnaire said that the current problems with the Farm Credit System would probably make manufacturers become more involved in providing financing for retail machinery purchases.

These projections represent the median response range of the survey of 50 major producers of field machinery and 28 manufacturers of farmstead equipment. Members were asked to respond only to questions pertaining to products they manufacture or sell, but to make the predictions on an industry-wide basis.

FARM WHEEL TRACTORS

In the forecast for all tractors, unit sales for 1986 are expected to decrease less than 1% in 1986 (.08%) and to come back by 1.2% in 1987.

In 1985, there was an increase of 12.1% in the "under 40 hp" category and it is predicted that this size tractor will stay at this level for the next two years. The "100 and over hp" category took a dramatic dip of 27.7% in 1985 and is expected to go down another 5.7% in 1986 and remain at that level for 1987.

Four-wheel drive tractors dropped 26.7% in 1985 and are expected to have another 1.9% drop in 1986, but then gain 8.8% in 1987.

GRAIN HARVESTING EQUIPMENT

Sales of self-propelled combines in 1985 were off 26.4%. Manufacturers see them dropping another 2.4% by 1986 and then return near 1985 levels by 1987.

The forecast indicates that corn heads will continue down 9.6% in 1986, but back up 7.8% in volume in 1987.

TILLAGE EQUIPMENT

Most tillage products took a serious dip in 1985. Moldboard plows were down 11.5%, and are expected to drop another 5% in 1986. Disc Harrows were down 16%, but are predicted to remain at that level in 1986, with a slight rise of 2% in 1987. Chisel plows were down 5% in 1985, but are predicted to show increases of 2.5% and 4.5% for 1986 and 1987, respectively.

HAY AND FORAGE EQUIPMENT

The market for balers in the under 200 pound bale class was off 15.3%. in 1985 and 1986 sales are expected to dip slightly by 1.4%, then up by 4.3% in 1987.

The big baler market (over 200 pound bales), which took a 15.4% dip in 1985, is estimated to remain level for 1986 and then up by 4.7% in 1987.

Forage Harvesters, which had a disastrous year in 1985 with a 30.4% drop are anticipated to continue with another 4% drop in 1986 and then regain the 1985 level by 1987.

Mower conditioners were off 13.9% in 1985. The 1986 forecast is for another 1% drop, than a 2.8% gain in 1987.

Self-propelled windrowers, down by 23% in 1985, are expected to drop another 3.8% in 1986, then rebound by 7.8% in 1987.

Grinder-mixers follow the same trend. Off by 25.5% in 1985, this product is forecast to drop another 2.9% in 1986 and 5.9% in 1987.

Manure spreaders were down 135 in 1985 and are expected to drop off another 3% in 1986 and then remain level for 1987.

FARMSTEAD EQUIPMENT

In the following product categories, manufacturers forecast the change in retail dollar sales.

Portable augers and elevators are predicted to be up 5% in both 1986 and 1987. Both grain bins and crop dryers are projected to be up 10% in 1986 and level in 1987. Batch and continuous flow dryers are anticipated to be up 8% in 1986 and up another 7.5% in 1987.

Dairy and beef mechanization equipment is predicted to be up 25 in 1986 and another 3% in 1987. However, hog mechanization equipment is forecast for no change in 1986, with a 5% growth foreseen in 1987. No change is seen for milking machine sales in either 1986 or 1987.

The companies which participate in this survey manufacture more than 90% of the nation's field machinery and farmstead equipment sold in the U.S. and overseas. They are all members of the Farm and Industrial Equipment Institute, the major trade association for farm and industrial equipment manufacturers in North America.

FIEI provides to manufacturers services in such areas as electronics, engineering, legislative and government relations, product liability, public relations, safety, statistics and transportation.

Farm Talk

By

Jerry Webb

The agricultural pollution hassle seems to be going in opposite directions at the same time. While one line of thinking suggests that farmers are the cause of an awful lot of pollution, another indicates that farm and forest land will be the ultimate and best dumping grounds for all sorts of unwanted things.

It's hard to see how a patch of ground can be both polluter and savior at the same time, but that's what's been suggested.

Almost any essay on soil and water pollution lists farmers high on the list of wrongdoers. Such things as animal waste, commercial fertilizers, pesticides and other chemicals are on every ecologist's top ten list of bad things. Farmers are scorned for the evil they perform each season as they fertilize their crops. More than one citizen's group has fought to stop farmers from spreading manure on their own land. A steady stream of agricultural chemicals is being taken away from farmers because they are said to be unsafe for the environment.

And yet, while the attack on agricultural pollution continues, other ecologists who feel just as strongly about our environment are looking at ways to make our open spaces — farm and forest — dumping grounds for urban garbage.

Research conducted at the University of Florida makes the point rather well — pine trees grow better in a mixture of garbage and soil then they do in Mother Earth alone. Not only that, but there appears to be no lingering after-affects, no run-off, nothing to upset the purists.

After trying to do everything with sewage from making building blocks to animal feed, it finally occurred to someone that the best thing to do was to ship it to the country and spread it on the land. Not exactly a new idea — in fact, one that seems to go directly against the ecology movement.

The Florida researchers started with a bare four-acre plot that had been in timber. They mixed garbage and sludge from a secondary sewage treatment plant and worked it into the soil at the rate of 100 tons per acre. Pine seedlings were planted in the fall.

By the next spring, it was obvious that the seedlings were doing better in the garbage plots than in the untreated plots. They survived the winter better, and were much taller and healthier in appearance. Some trees reached a height of five feet in only eight months. In addition, a dense undergrowth developed on the garbage plots protecting the soil from erosion and providing food and cover for wildlife.

Since trees aren't food, there's no danger of human contamination, and the long growing period for pines - 20 to 30 years - allows for large amounts of garbage and sewage to decompose slowly. There appears to be no leaching or run-off problems — in fact, the mixture holds moisture better than regular soil. That's one reason why it grows more and larger trees.

There would appear to be a lot of good reasons for using garbage on forest land. It would seem to be a good use for the stuff and we need the trees. No doubt, the "forces for good" in this world can think of reasons why this shouldn't be done. If they can stop manure spreading, which they're still trying hard to do, they will probably stop sludge spreading even if it is in a forest.

But looking at the other side for a moment, suppose this garbage thing catches on and the ecologists accept it. Where would a city like Baltimore or Philadelphia find a woods big enough to take its output? Or for that matter, a farmer or forester willing to take it? The Florida researchers say a few hundred acres could handle the waste from a city of 100,000 people. But there are a lot of cities and if this idea works they will all want forest land for dumps. As the population and garbage output increase, available space will run out and the same farmer who is being told he can't spread cow manure on his land may be required to spread urban waste a few years hence.

The point that really grabs me out of all this is that the decisions to spread or not spread and the material to be spread or not spread, will be determined by people who have never been any closer to a farm than the drifting odor from a manure pile.

Christmas tree growers conference

HONESDALE — The first Northeast Regional Christmas Tree Growers Conference will be held Saturday, March 15, 1986 at the Luzerne County Community College in Nanticoke, Pa. from 8:15 a.m until 4 p.m.

The meeting is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension Service. Topics to be discussed include the following: the business of growing trees, Christmas tree marketing, soils and soil fertility, weed control, and sprayers and calibration.

Speakers will be: James Finley, Extension forestor; Dr. Alvi Voigt, Extension marketing specialist; Dr. Larry Kuhns, Extension horticulturist; and Dr. Donald Daum, Extension agricultural engineer.

The purpose of the conference is to provide basic information to new growers as well as to up-date more experienced growers on current cultural and marketing practices. This is in recognition that Pennsylvania growers must produce quality trees in the most efficient manner in order to realize a profit.

Meeting enrollment will be limited to the first 250 people who pre-register. For additional information and registration form contact your local Extension Office. In Wayne County contact the Extension Office in the Wayne County Courthouse, Honesdale, Pa.18431 — phone 717-253-5970 ext. 114.

Brockett's Ag Advice

Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Are you ready for planting?

Are you ready for planting time? When was the last time that you really looked at your spring cropping plans? A lot of farmers are not going to get as much money as they would like for crop needs. Some are going to get all of the money they want but won't use it as wisely as they could.

Are finances going to be tight this year? If so, you could probably gain by soil testing, setting fertilizer priorities, planning on needs, and following a budget. Are you ready? Only you can answer this question but many farmers could reduce crop planting costs without reducing yields if they knew how many nutrients were needed, which weeds were a problem, and whether they have a built-in insect problem.

Can You Save?

Can you save on crop costs? Here are a few suggestions: (1) Take good care of lime needs - it is the key that you need to make everything else work; (2) Feed your plants a balanced ration; (3) Don't be in a hurry to tear up an old hay stand - it may be cheaper to renovate than to replant; (4) Use an alfalfa-grass mix instead of just alfalfa - seeding is cheaper and life of stand will probably be longer; (5) Plan to satisfy your forage needs first if you are a dairy or livestock farmer - good quality forage is the number one factor in reducing the cost of producing milk or meat; (7) Drive your equipment carefully - you save fuel, repairs and perhaps lives; (8) Practice a good maintenance program - you save time, aggravation, and bills.

Temporary Costs

Every year I get a question "should I grow annuals such as sorghum or rye?" Every year I answer the same way "yes, as an emergency crop but not as a permanent crop". There has been some research that shows a group of crops called "brassicas" to be very productive if pastured.

Most of you know this group of crops under their more common name such as turnips. You might ask your county agent for some information about them. They are a relatively inexpensive crop to grow.

Let's go back to sorghum (and its many crosses with sudan grass) and small grains. They both make better feed than snowballs, straw, oak leaves, junky hay or a lot of other things. We have had heifers get fat on sudan grass pasture. Cattle relish both crops as green chop.

Chemical tests appear to be nearly equal to corn silage in many respects. However, they are not ususally as good as the old corn silage and alfalfa-grass forage combination for stored feed.

So use them in limited quantity for "in between feed" or "emergency feed" or temporary crops. They will do fine in that role. Don't go overboard on them.

Remember that farmers have made money with good alfalfa or alfalfa-grass forage for years. We have not yet found an adequate replacement for it. Likewise with corn silage.

One problem with rye is timing. It is a good economical feed but harvest timing can result in delays in corn planting. In turn this may mean lower corn yields. Rye should be harvested during the rather short four or five day period it is at its peak in feed value. After that, quality goes downhill very rapidly. Unfortunately this period often coincides with the best time to start planting corn.

Farmers talk about their bankers and lenders

RACINE, WI — In the last few years, economic changes have placed many farmers on the brink of bankruptcy. Some blame agricultural lenders, who, during the booming 1970's, often encouraged farmers to borrow heavily. What are farmer's attitudes toward their lenders? Do farmer's blame lenders for unmanageable debt?

Surprisinly, no. More than 55 percent of farmers surveyed give ag lenders favorable marks and rate them as their most important partner in business.

Another statistic proves farmers' loyalty to their regular lender: 72 percent of farmers have never changed lending institutions.

These findings stem from an independent marketing research study, just released by Case IH, which measures farmer attitudes toward lenders, ranks lender services and explores the lender-farmer relationship.

In September, interviewers telephoned a geographically-balanced sample of 679 Class 1-A farmers throughout North America. Respondents averaged more than 25 years of farming experience and represented a cross-section of crop, dairy and livestock operations.

Here's what surveyed farmers conclude about lenders:

General attitudes

As noted before, 55 percent of farmers rate lenders favorably, 30 percent are neutral and 15 percent rate lenders unfavorably.

On specific attributes, more than 40 percent of farmers believe agricultural lenders have good reputations, offer a valuable service and meet their needs. However, almost 25 percent of farmers believe lenders do not know the agriculture business. A small group (7.0 pecent) said lenders encourage unneeded loans. Six percent said lenders require too much collateral and that loans are too difficult to obtain.

Of all farmers, crop and dairy farmers tended to have slightly higher opinions of lenders than livestock farmers. "Crop and dairy farmers may have more frequent contact with lenders, resulting in better relationships," Borden observes.

Farmers perceive their ag lenders as their most important professional partner, ranking above fertilizer/chemical dealers, agricultural equipment dealers, accountants, veterinarians and lawyers.

What are the most important services an ag lender can offer? On a 5.0 scale, the following all received 4.1 ratings: These services were viewed with equal importance.

* a full range of services to provide for all credit needs,
* the lowest interest rates in the area, and
* flexibility in dealing with farm credit.

On the same scale, other services were rated as follows: These services outranked other services such as providing ideas to make more money (3.4); long-term planning (3.3); marketing advice (3.1); estate planning (3.0); tax advice (3.0); and equipment leasing programs (2.4).

U.S. farmers consider lender services to be slightly more important overall than their Canadian counterparts, but specific services are ranked in the same order of value. "More severe cash flow problems and differences in government programs may have caused U.S. farmers to rely more heavily on their lenders in recent years," explains John A. Borden, executive vice president-marketing, Case IH.

Changing Relationship

More than 71 percent of farmers believe that the farmer-lender relationship has changed significantly in the last several years, primarily due to the tough economic climate. More than 63 percent say lenders are more conservative and tighter with money and 21 percent believe that lenders are stricter and require more detailed records.

How often do farmers meet with their lenders. The typical farmer visits his lender's office 4.5 times a year.

Types of credit used

Almost all farmers (98 percent) have access to and use several types of lending institutions. Most popular are commercial banks, used by 62 percent of farmers, followed by Federal Land Banks (FLB's) at 42 percent, Production Credit Association (PCA's) at 39 percent and the Farmer's Home Administration (FmHA) at 18 percent. Rounding out the sample, 16 percent of farmers use manufacturers' credit, 8 percent rely on insurance companies and 6 percent use savings and loan institutions.

"One of the most under-utilized forms of credit is offered by manufacturers. Only 43 percent of farmers think that they have access to this type of credit," saic Borden.

Different types of lending institutions seem to fill varying credit needs. Fifty percent of farmers give high marks to commercial banks for convenience and familiarity. Forty-four percent say FLB's offer good long term loans and 34 percent say they have low, competitive rates. Farmers preferring PCA's give a wide range of reasons for choosing these lenders including low interest rates (31 percent), convenience (22 percent), good service and the perception that lenders at PCA's have a greater understanding of agriculture (15 percent). .

NEWARK, Del. — "In deciding whether to use mulches, drip irrigation and/or row covers, weigh the economics involved," says Ed Kee, University of Delaware extension vegetable crops specialist "Does the potential increase in return justify the added costs? Will the extra labor involved be prohibitive? Are the odds in your favor for getting the most benefit in terms of earlines and yield? Does the market usually offer price incentives for being early? Or, as a result of harvesting early, are you likely to be competing against produce from other regions?"

Kee notes that in 1985 polyethylene mulch cost about $120 per acre for a 6-foot spacing. Drip irrigation tubing cost approximately $150 per acre, and row covers cost $200 to $300 per acre He suggests that you determine the costs for your situation, calculate the potential return, and then make your decision.

Mulches provide a warm, steady soil temperature that's ideal for root growth, says Kee Clear and black polyethylene film are the most popular types Clear polyethylene is used primarily on cucumbers, melons, eggplants and sweet corn. With the exception of corn, crops grown under clear plastic require soil fumigation to control weeds, diseases and insects.

Melons and eggplants also do well with black polyethylene mulch, as do peppers and tomatoes, says the specialist. Aluminum foil mulch is used on fall squash because it repels aphids which spread mosaic virus Some mulches can be used on either seeded or transplanted crops such as cucurbits. Transplanters are available or can be built to plant through the plastic

Several methods of removing the plastic have been tried, but on small acreage Kee says it's best to remove the mulch by hand by running a coulter down the center of the row and picking it up from each side Commercial removal equipment is also available.

In a typical commercial operation, mulch and drip irrigation are laid down at the same time in rows four feet wide, says Kee Trickle irrigation is a low pressure system that supplies water directly to or near a plant's root zone. Water is carried through plastic tubes and released through small openings. Trickle irrigation avoids the problem of uneven moisture that may result from overhead irrigation. The ground also stays at the optimum moisture level.

Trickle irrigation is used on a wide range of fruit and vegetable crops, says Kee It is especially effective in combination with mulches and sandy soils and on such crops as cantaloupes, watermelons, squash, peppers, eggplants and tomatoes At present, mulch and most trickle tubing cannot be reused successfully, so new materials must be bought each year.

Kee says row covers help hasten crop maturity Currently there are three kinds—clear plastic, slitted clear plastic, and slitted opaque plastic. All are supported by wire hoops at 5-foot to 6-foot intervals Floating row covers, made of spun fibers which lie closely over the row, are also available These work best on low growing vine crops, says the specialist. Upright plants like tomatoes and peppers can be injured when the floating row cover rubs against them.

Clear plastic row covers increase temperatures more than opaque materials However, because of the danger of heat injury, Kee suggests using slitted materials Even with the slits, clear plastic can cause heat injury, he says, especially when the plants have grown enough to fill much of the air space in the tunnel Heat injury doesn't occur as frequently with opaque materials.

Laying out row covers usually involves a combination of mechanical and hand labor, although research is under way on equipment that will do the job in one operation, Kee says terest rates as the main benefit of FmHA and note that they use this lender more often for short term loans. And, 21 percent of farmers use FmHA because they cannot borrow elsewhere.

More information on drip irrigation systems for Delaware vegetable growers is available free from the county extension office in Newark (451-2506), Dover (736-1448) or Georgetown (856-7303) Ask for extension bulletin No 123

Trust

Farmers expressed some concern about the financial strength of various lending institutions and questioned their solvency; FLB's concerned 65 percent of farmers; PCA's concerned 53 percent; the FmHA concerned 32 percent, and commercial banks concerned 25 percent of the farmers surveyed In general dairy farmers trust the solvency of lending institutions twice as much as livestock farmers "Again this may result from more regular contact between farmer and lender due to recent economic factors," Borden explained

Case offers insurance to boost ROPS usage

RACINE, WI. Case IH is a joint sponsor of a program to promote widespread use of rollover protective structures (ROPS) and seat belts on agricultural tractors.

The National Safety Council, the National Institute for Farm Safety and member manufacturers have been studying the effectiveness of saving lives with rollover protective structures and seat belts for some time. They have concluded that "the severity of injuries has been greatly reduced and fatalities practically eliminated through use of both ROPS and seat belts when user misuse or operator error causes a tractor overturn."

Case IH provides ROPS and seat belts as standard equipment, with no deduct option, on all new Case International tractors ordered after February 1, 1985.

As an additional measure to encourage acceptance of ROPS and seat belts, Case IH is offering a free $50,000, two-year insurance police to anyone who purchases, currently owns or installs a certified ROPS or complete integral ROPS cab on a Case, International Harvester or Case International tractor.

Administered by Employers Life Insurance Company, the policy will pay $50,000 to the estate of any operator fatally injured in a rollower accident of a Case, International Harvester or Case International tractor equipped with an approved and certified ROPS. Among the conditions that apply are: the tractor was being used for its intended purpose, the operator was wearing a seat belt and the accident was not a collision with another vehicle.

If the tractor is equipped with foldable ROPS, it must have been properly secured in the upright position at the time of the accident.

The insurance offer applies to agricultural tractors manufactured by Case IH and Internaitonal Harvester, regardless of age, as long as a certified ROPS is in place.

An insurance certificate verifying the coverage will be issure by Case IH dealers:

1) upon the sale of a new tractor;

2) upon the installation of a new ROPS on an older model tractor, or

3) upon the dealer certification that the tractor is equipped with ROPS and a seat belt, has had no prior damage or modification, and had not been repaired in any unauthorized way.

To receive an insurance certificate, owners of tractors already equipped with ROPS should bring their tractors to their Case IH dealer for a free safety inspection.

Two years after the initial issue of the certificate, a new two-year certificate providing the same coverage will be offered to the customer upon recertification by the dealer and payment of a $10 fee to Employers Life Insurance.

Insurance certificate forms and more information about the ROPS program are available at all Case IH dealerships.

But what you're likely to enjoy most is thinking about how much time and money you're saving, being able to get tough jobs done fast.

You'll enjoy the knowledge that your Gehl outclasses the competition. With dual, hand-operated LOAD-TRAK T-bar controls—one on each side within easy reach—and simpler to learn and use than foot controls. A dual-purpose seat bar that also serves as a comfortable arm rest. Rollback ROPS for quick serviceability. Quick Hydro-Lock attachment change. Easy engine access. Plus many more convenience features

You'll also enjoy being able to add specialty attachments, easily and quickly, confident your machine can handle them. Like pallet forks. Utility fork with grapple. Buckets. Backhoes. Trenchers. Tree diggers Sweepers. You name it.

Take a look at Gehl's full line of loaders and pick the one that's best for you. On the popular liquid-cooled 3510 gas/3610 diesel and 4510 gas/4610 diesel loaders, you'll like the self-leveling load action. And you'll like Gehl's very affordable 3310 gas/3410 diesel with easy handling and superior engineering.

For extra heavy work loads, choose the new 6620 diesel. With an SAE lift rating of 2,050 lbs., a lift height of 123 in., and a reach of 35 in., it's the biggest loader in the lineup, and outreaches even the so-called "super boom" machines.

Your Gehl dealer will show you how these versatile skid loaders can run circles around the competition. Make us prove it with a demonstration. You'll enjoy that! Gehl Company, West Bend, WI 53095.

Buyout's tax effect

I can't remember another farm program where so many resources have been joined in an educational effort to explain it to producers as you are getting in the Dairy Termination Program. Anyone on a dairy farm that isn't aware of the "whole herd buy out," officially named the Dairy Termination Program, must have been out of the country since Christmas.

However, being aware of the program is not enough. You must understand the restrictions and rewards that it provides for those who choose to participate whether or not the program is good for you will depend on what you bid to pay your expenses for the next five years.

There are no limits on what you can bid but neither does anyone know what the cutoff bid will be in any of the three disposal periods. So, your obligation before March 7 is to determine as accurately as you can, how many dollars you will take to go out of the dairy business for five years.

Along with educational efforts on the awareness of the program, many agencies and organizations are available with advice and information to help you decide on participation and calculate a bid.

Everything from do-it-yourself worksheets to computer programs are available to help you but none of these will give you an honest answer unless you provide complete and accurate information from your farm financial records.

If you don't know where to start, call your county Extension office for the "Worksheet for Calculating Break Even Bids for the Dairy Termination Program."

Before you get past the first page you'll learn that it will be a good idea to involve your income tax consultant to help you. He can be helpful in determining the tax liabilities you incur from the sale of assets such as cattle and machinery and help you choose the payback option best for you.

Remember, that a lot of the benefits that the family enjoyed that were included in farm expenses may have to be met from your Dairy Termination Program income. Also remember that your payments will be taxed as ordinary income and without any offsetting farm expenses you may be paying more income taxes.

Certainly there are other considerations to be included in your decision to participate and farm periodicals and organizations have a lot of helpful advice. However, from the meetings I've attended so far on this program it seems that producers have not given enough thought to the tax implications.

Don't get caught giving more back to the government than you expected and come up short in covering your expenses.

Muddy Waters

For the majority of dairymen who choose to stay in the business, the future is getting more unpredictable since the passage of the Farm Security Act of 1985. They may even have to change the name because "security" doesn't seem to be the intention of the legislation.

Certainly the dairy support price for the future is part of the farm bill but it takes us only to 1987 and where it goes after that will depend on the participation in the Dairy Termination Program. We do know that there will be assessments on all milk starting April 1 at 40 cents a hundred and 25 cents from January to September in 1987. That alone reduces the "effective" support price to $11.20 this year and $11.15 to October 1987

But what muddles the water is the effect of the Gramm-Rudman or any other deficit cutting legislation that Congress approves. To satisfy Gramm-Rudman another 50 cent drop in the support price or another 10 cent assessment is now under consideration.

So it appears that Congress won't wait to see how successful the Dairy Termination Program will be. They may start now to reduce the cost of the price support program. It is expected that contracts made under the Dairy Termination Program will be honored without reductions so, ironically, participation in that program may provide the only predictable income for producers for the next five years

January Records

January shipments from milk producers to Order 2 handlers broke all records with over a billion pounds. The previous record was set back in 1965. Usually you don't get that high in Order 2 until the spring flush so you hit the ground running in 1986 maintaining the momentum of increasing production that started a year ago.

The concern now is how high will production go in May and June with this kind of a beginning. Every spring we worry about "homeless" milk but this year it seems to be a real concern for handlers and coops.

Some coops in the Midwest and far west have asked members to keep a lid on production this spring and some have even considered quotas and penalties.

However, in spite of the production increases since last summer the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series has dropped only nine cents from the $11.21 in October. Of course the $11.21 was $1.43 less than October 1984 so the price can't fall much further with the support price at $11.30 for 3.5 milk unless Gram-Rudman makes another cut.

So, all this translates into a blend price of $11.92 in January for Order 2 shippers and that's nine cents less than December and $1 42 less than January 1985.

Woodhouse made the move to provide better service to their ever-increasing number of mid-Atlantic farm and power equipment dealers.

Other Woodhouse territories are serviced by branch offices in Syracuse, New York, Waterville, Maine, and by corporate headquarters in West Springfield, Massachusetts.

Tylan products help keep hogs gaining fast at all stages.

From farrowing to finishing, and for sows and gilts, the Tylan® Team helps you fight hog disease and lowers your production costs.

Tylan® Sulfa-G™ is the only feed-grade antibiotic approved to control both atrophic rhinitis[1] and deadly bacterial pneumonia[2] in starter/grower pigs. Tylan Sulfa-G reduces Bordetella infections in sows and gilts, too, before they pass the organisms on to their litters.

In growing and finishing hogs, Tylan® Feed Medication at 100 grams a ton maintains weight gains and feed efficiency in the presence of atrophic rhinitis.

Tylan® plus vitamins Soluble helps control and treat swine dysentery (bloody scours) caused by sensitive pathogens.

Respiratory diseases like rhinitis and pneumonia are always a threat to a herd's performance, but the Tylan Team can keep your hogs growing fast. For more information, ask your veterinarian or feed man.

Automatic Micro-Mist Sprayer Controls Droplet Size

The Automatic Micro-Mist Concentrate Sprayer can be powered by the tractor pto for use on rowcrops, vegetables and orchards.

The Automatic Micro-Mist Concentrate Sprayer is a faster, more efficient, economical alternative to conventional boom and aerial spraying of rowcrops, vegetables and orchards.

It takes mist blowing techniques a step further by giving the operator the ability to control the diameter of the spray droplets and choose the diameter best for each particular spraying application.

Controlling droplet diameter results in increased effectiveness and reduced materials cost.

The smaller droplets of the Micro-Mister coat all sides of the target evenly, due to the powerful turbulence produced by the unit. The Micro-Mister effectively coats the undersides of leaves, reaches inside trees, even coats the back sides of fruit.

The compact size and the utilization of chemical concentrates by the Micro-Mister offers many advantages. The unit comes in models that can be powered by PTO on small tractors, or a gasoline powered skid unit that slides into the bed of any pickup. Because the Micro-Mister eliminates the need for cumbersome water hauling equipment that requires additional manpower and time-consuming stops for refilling, the Automatic Micro-Mister saves both time and money.

The Automatic Micro-Mister can offer effective coverage up to 250 feet, depending on application, and can operate at speeds up to 12 m.p.h., with no dangerous overspray or drift.

Foraging Around

By Dr. John E. Baylor
Director of Market Development
Beachley-Hardy Seed Company

Forages for Horses

High quality forage in the form of both pasture and hay represents an important source of feed for your horse. For quality pasture it can be one of the best and least expensive feed sources. And good quality hay, of course, can provide most of the nutrients, except salt and water, for many mature horses - and is very important for all classes of horses.

Pasture

When acreage is very limited, less than one acre per mature horse, exercise may be the main use of pasture. Pasture for this purpose, in addition to exercise itself: (1) provides access to fresh air and sunlight, and (2) provides freedom from respiratory problems frequently associated with stabled animals. However, this type of pasture cannot be expected to supply more than a minimum amount of feed.

But grass is the horse's natural food. And if you have an adequate acreage of productive, well managed pasture it can provide most of the feed requirements for horses during the growing season, including protein, vitamins and minerals, and usually at the least cost to you. In fact, for many classes of horses good pasture (and I emphasize good) is sufficient to meet all of their nutrient requirements.

Pasture Improvement

Well limed and fertilized Kentucky bluegrass is generally most suitable when your acreage is very limited. Kentucky bluegrass can withstand close and continuous grazing better than most other grasses, and, when well established and properly fertilized, it produces a reasonably dense and attractive sod.

In heavy traffic areas, along fences and around gates and water troughs, tall fescue may be used. Older varieties such as Kentucky 31 are generally considered less palatable than bluegrass. But tall fescue does produce one of the toughest, heavy traffic sods. However, horse authorities tell us brood mares should be removed from pastures containing tall fescue at least eight weeks prior to foaling.

But, whether it's for exercise or exercise and feed, if you already have good stands of desirable grass and legume species such as bluegrass and white clover, lime and fertilizer, together with good management may be sufficient to assure good horse pasture. Otherwise you may need to start from scratch and reestablish a new pasture using improved species.

For well drained soils a mixture of Kentucky bluegrass, timothy, red clover and ladino clover is considered standard for horse pasture. But newer varieties of tetraploid perennial ryegrass are extremely high in quality and may either be added to the above mixture or replace bluegrass in the mix. On soils with variable drainage Norcen orl Empire birdsfoot trefoil may be used in place of red and ladino clovers.

But whether you improve your pastures by the use of lime and fertilizer alone or by reseeding, sound management is essential to keep the desired species persistent and productive. This imcludes rotational grazing, clipping and dragging pastures one or more thimes per year and a good maintenance fertilization program.

Hay

For hay to be of the most value as feed for horses it must be high in quality. That means early cut, leafy, free of must, mold and dust, free of foreign material such as weeds and stubble, and green. This type of hay is usually rich in energy, protein, minerals and vitamins, and is readily consumed by horses with little wastage. Thus, whether you are buying, selling, or just feeding hay to horses these are the factors you should consider.

In feeding trials at the University of Delaware, horses preferred legume hay over grass hay and clover hay over alfalfa hay. However, when quality was high, horses were content with a number of hay mixtures, including a variety of legumes and grasses. Respiratory or digestive disturbances frequently associated with feeding hay were found to be more related to dust and mold than to mixtures.

A number of Pennsylvania horsemen have indicated that early-cut, well-cured, dust-free birdsfoot trefoil-grass mixtures are relished by horses. But alfalfa-grass and clover-grass mixtures, and even straight grass hays, are highly acceptable when early-cut, leafy and free of molds and other dust.

In general, well managed legume-grass hays are higher in protein and minerals than straight grasses with similar management. However, protein, and to a lesser extent mineral, levels are so readily changed by fertilizer applications, time of cutting and other hay making practices, especially for grasses, that with good management any hay species or mixture can be satisfactory in these constituents for more classes of horses. One caution: mainly alfalfa-hay, while normally high in protein, may contain an excessive amount of calcium in relationship to phosphorus (wide Ca: P ratio) when fed as the sole source of forage to young, growing animals.

Anchor offers beef certificates

SAN ANTONIO, TX. – Anchor Animal Health will offer beef gift certificates as a premium to its customers and distribution network in 1986.

The company announced the program to a meeting of the American National CattleWomen during the National Cattlemen's Association Convention in San Antonio.

Beef gift certificates, originated by the CattleWomen, are gift certificates good only for the purchase of beef in grocery stores and meat markets. Anchor will buy the certificates through state Cattlewomen organizations.

Customers can earn beef gift certificates by buying STEER-oid and HEIFER-oid implants with other Anchor products from January 1 through May 31, 1986.

"We're encouraging livestock producers that earn the certificates to use them in further beef promotions," David Heinje, Anchor business unit manager, said. "They can donate the certificates to local charities or work with the local CattleWomen chapter on other promotions. One such opportunity is the Cattle Drive for Hunger sponsored by the American National CattleWomen.

"It's a low-cost way for producers to fund local promotion, earn local publicity and spread the good word about beef," Heinje said.

Farmers encouraged to participate in grain storage survey

LEESPORT — Donald E. Lutz, chairman of the Berks County ASC Committee, said large grain and oilseed supplies necessitated the farm storage capacity survey currently being conducted by the U S Department of Agriculture to determine available and potentially available storage space in different areas of the country

"Survey forms have been mailed to 1,752 farm operators and other entities in Berks County with noncommercial storage," he said USDA policymakers will review the survey results and attempt to pinpoint where handling and storage problems could occur during harvest

To verify off-farm storage space, ASCS and the Statistical Reporting Service are jointly surveying commercial facilities

In 1978, U S on-farm storage was estimated at 9 95 billion bushels, according to Lutz As of January 1, 1985, off-farm storage was estimated at 8 12 billion bushels

Lutz encourages farm operators to complete and return the survey form as soon as possible The study will help determine storage capacity for permanent and temporary dry grain or oilseed crops, storage space for ear corn and the storage capacity for high moisture grain

Deutz-Allis adds two tractors

MILWAUKEE, WI – Deutz-Allis recently announced two new row-crop tractors in their 6200 series line. The model 6265 comes in with 65 PTO hp and inside the model 6275 rests a 73 PTO hp unit. Both are available in 2-wheel or all-wheel drive models. This now makes five tractors in the 6200 series, according to Frank Kaplan, marketing manager.

"These new models are powered with fuel-efficient, direct air-cooled diesel engines that are so precision built they don't require head gaskets. These 4-cylinder engines have impressive power reserve, low maintenance requirements, long life and proven economic payoff," said Kaplan.

"The power is put to work via a multi-range mechanical transmission with 12 forward speeds and 4 reserve speeds. All gears are synchronized in each range."

Both models offer Transfermatic hydraulic systems of open center design with tandem engine-mounted, gear-driven pumps. A category II, three-point hitch with linkage stabilizers is standard equipment.

These two new tractors are available with the unique Twin-Power option. This feature significantly increases the tractor's working productivity because it provides a PTO and 3-point hitch at both the front and rear of the machine, Kaplan explained.

"The StarCab and the ROPS platform were designed to give the operator a common-sense work environment that combines safety, comfort, convenience and elbow room. Air conditioning and heating are standard equipment on the cab models," says Kaplan.

The new Deutz-Allis 6265 produces the punch of larger tractors during planting, but requires less fuel.

Automatic unveils MS sprayers

PENDER, NB – The new "MS" Series Sprayers from Automatic are designed for compact tractors, according to Ryder Supply. Scaled down versions of the Automatic Mist Sprayer, the new models are ideal for small spraying jobs, working in close quarters and spot spraying.

Available 3-point mounted, skid mounted or trailered, powered by PTO or gas engine, the sprayers operate on as little as 12 h.p. Standard equipment features nylon roller pump and 25 or 55 gallon poly tank with centrifugal fan to create the air blast.

Automatic's Micronizer Spray Head is available as optional equipment to provide controlled droplet size or standard cone nozzles for general spraying.

For further details contact the manufacturer, Automatic Equipment Mfg. Co., Department NR, Pender, Nebraska 68074, 402-385-3054, or the Distributor, Ryder Supply, Box 219, Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, 17201, 717-263-9111.

Whether or not the whole herd buyout program will be effective remains to be seen, but one thing it did do was catch people's attention. It forced them to think about the future and to evaluate their own situation as they prepare to meet that future.

A lot of people did a lot of soul searching and a lot of pencil pushing. I was pleased at the number of dairymen who took the time to calculate their costs. That is something all of need to do as we prepare to meet our future.

In the dairy business, we need to know how much it costs us to produce milk, the nature of these costs, and how to change these costs or improve income if we don't like what we see.

On most farms, the single largest item of expense is feed. However, just because feed is the largest item of expense, we have to be careful that we don't focus our attention on feed alone; other costs also deserve our serious attention. Nevertheless this article will focus on feed costs.

Determining Costs

As we attempt to determine our feed costs, we need to look beyond just the cost of purchasing feeds. We need to be concerned about our total, actual feed and feed-related costs, including those which pertain to the heifers, and to any feed that is wasted or spoiled.

To do this, we can't simply rely on market values. Instead, we need to consider all costs that are associated with the growing, harvesting, storing and handling of feed crops.

This includes a share of the mortgage, rent, real estate taxes, insurance, depreciation, interest, fuel, labor, repairs, utilities, etc.

Reducing Costs

There are numerous things we can do to reduce feed costs per cwt of milk produced.

1. Maximize the use of high quality, home-grown forages. Concentrates are necessary for supporting high levels of production, but so are high quality forages. Of the two, I'm most concerned about forage intake. Our goal is to maintain a normal rumen that functions at peak efficiency 24 hours a day. We also want to preserve dry matter intake. That requires a lot of high quality forage, such as young alfalfa, a balanced ration, and proper feeding techniques - more on that later.

2. Reducing feed purchases. In addition to helping maintain a more efficient rumen, one that produces more milk per pound of feed fed, the liberal use of good quality forages may also enable you to reduce feed purchases. However, be careful not to carry this concept too far; you don't want to short change the herd - and yourself - in the long run for the sake of saving a few dollars now. Purchase what is necessary to balance the ration, and to maintain herd health and reasonable levels of production.

3. Feed for reasonably high levels of efficient production. The precise level to shoot for will vary from farm to farm. Generally speaking, higher producing cows convert feed to milk more efficiently. The trick is to accomplish this while holding feed costs in line.

4. Cull low producers, avoid long dry periods and feed no more heifers than necessary. Low producers and non-producers run up your feed costs per cwt of milk produced.

5. Raise only those heifers that have the genetic potential for improving your herd, and raise them in such a manner that will enable them to be growthy enough to calve at 23-24 months of age, weighing 1200 pounds (Holsteins). This requires a good heifer management program. It's better to do a good job with fewer heifers than to do a poor job with more.

This accomplishes several things. Larger heifers will calve with less stress and will produce more in their first lactation, and possibly in succeeding lactations. By calving earlier and producing more, heifers start making a profit much sooner in their life, they'll probably be in the herd longer, and they'll have greater returns over feed costs.

6. Balanced rations and feeding techniques also affect feed efficiency. Test forages frequently enough to pick up changes in quality, including moisture. Every dairyman should have his own moisture tester so he can adjust rations and control DM intakes.

A balanced ration and a recommended feed program is of little value unless the cows consume what is prescribed. And, the manner in which feeds are presented to the cow is very important to the rumen. TMR's have helped many dairymen overcome the inconveniences of keeping a mixture of fresh forages in front of the cows most of the day, and of offering concentrates to cows at frequent intervals.

As forage quality increases, fiber content decreases. So, as we feed high quality, finely chopped, ensiled forages, we may need to feed more of it to ensure adequate fiber intake, or else add more fiber to the grain mix.

Feeding poorer quality, higher fiber forages to good milking, low testing cows isn't the answer. The fiber is less digestible. DM intake will be less and production will fall.

Save the best quality feed for the best producing cows; that's where it will generate the most returns.

7. Reduce the cost of purchased feeds by taking advantage of "good buys," bulk discounts, early payment discounts, etc. However, be careful not to forsake quality for price.

Consider the use of lower-cost by-products, as appropriate, and consult the services of a qualified nutritionist to advise you on how to use these products in your dairy ration.

Reducing Production and Storage Costs

1. Strive for reasonably high crop yields while also attempting to control production costs. Higher yields and longer-lived stands help to spread the overhead costs of land, crop establishment, and machinery over more tonage.

2. Reduce fertilizer expenditure by making full use of available manure.

3. Keep a lid on machinery costs. Consider leasing machinery or hiring custom operators, if appropriate, as an alternative to owning and operating your own machinery.

4. Evaluate the economics of leasing or farming a lot of acreage to harvest grain that might be cheaper to purchase.

5. Evaluate carefully, the costs and returns of new storge facilities. Are present facilities being used to their fullest poten-

FCA acts to comply with emergency Farm Credit law

McLEAN, VA – The Farm Credit Administation (FCA) has taken a series of actions to ensure rapid implementation of the Farm Credit Amendments Act of 1985, which became effective January 23.

"The law is straightforward in describing the information to which borrowers are entitled, and those provisions can be implemented before regulations are issued," said Donald E. Wilkinson, acting chairman of FCA. "The provisions dealing with actions on loan applications do not require regulations and are also effective immediately," he said.

The agency also directed system institutions to conserve their financial resources so they will be able to marshall those resources to help manage the current financial difficulty.

Wilkinson reminded system officials that full use must be made of internal financial resources before outside assistance is requested.

Rights of Applicants

"When a borrower obtains a loan, the law requires the disclosure of the interest rate, including examples of how the rate is affected by the purchase of stock or participation certificates. If it's a variable rate loan, the borrower must be told how much and how often the interest rate can go up during the term of the loan. And if there are no limitations, the factors that go into determining rate adjustments, including the cost of funds, operating expenses, and provisions for loan losses must be disclosed," Wilkinson said.

In addition, he explained, an applicant whose request for credit has been denied or reduced is entitled to a review by a credit committee that includes farmer board representation. The review must take place within 30 days after the applicant requests it. And the review committee's decision and the reasons for it must be promptly provided to the applicant in writing.

Wilkinson noted that the law further requires that borrowers be provided with copies of all documents they have signed as part of their loan transactions, as well as with copies of the articles of incorporation and by-laws of the institution.

"These provisions are designed not only to give borrowers essential information when obtaining loans, but to offer them a measure of protectin once the loans have been made," Wilkinson said.

Conserving Resources

The Farm Credit Administration has taken certain steps to make sure that healthier system institutions do not take actions that would reduce the resources available to the system as a whole.

System institutions may not take the following actions, without approval of the FCA:

* extraordinary operating and capital expenditures that are within the control of management or boards of directors and in excess of $250,000;
* major changes that increase the cost of employee benefit and pension plans or major changes in depreciation procedures;
* repurchase of unmatured debt instruments;
* payment of an interest rate on member funds held by a district bank in an amount that exceeds the member's loan rate; and * charging an interest rate by any Production Credit Association that is less than it is paying for money from the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank.

System officials were also reminded that all provisions of the allowance for losses accounts are to be in compliance with generally accepted accounting principles. And they were cautioned that these provisions would be reviewed by FCA examiners.

The agency also expressed concern over changes in interest rates by system institutions. It said proposed changes would be evaluated in the light of the individual situation and the effect the change would have on the system's overall financial position.

"We realize that any reduction in the interest rate of a particular institution would be welcomed by its borrowers," Wilkinson said, "but we have to be certain of its effect on the institution and on the overall long-term viability of the system."

Disclosure Regulations

The regulations mandating full financial disclosure by system institutions, Wilkinson said, will ensure that stockholders and investors receive the kind of financial and operational data they need to make informed decisions.

"Compliance with these regulations should eliminate questions about the accuracy and timeliness of information regarding the condition and performance of system institutions," Wilkinson said.

Wilkinson said FCA will move rapidly on the regulations to implement other elements of the law, including those that will get the Farm Credit Capital Corporation "up and running."

He said the speed with which the Congress enacted this legislation calls for a good faith effort on the part of the system to implement it. He expressed hope that the actions taken by the Farm Credit Administration facilitate that progress.

DHIA names new director

UNIVERSITY PARK – Robert F. Damm recently joined Pennsylvania DHIA as Director of Marketing and Field Services. In this position, Mr. Damm (rhymes with Tom) will be responsible for directing the state organization's efforts in the field through DHIA's six region managers, and for developing marketing and sales programs to increase the membership in DHIA.

Damm comes to Pennsylvania from Medford, Wisconsin where he was owner and operator of Peace Farm, a registered Holsteins operation with 60 milking cows, from 1972 until the herd was dispersed last September. He brings extensive experience in cooperative organizations, having served on numerous cooperative boards including Central Wisconsin DHIC as director and president.

Damm was a principal player in the February 1985 consolidation of Minnesota Valley Breeder's Association and Midwest Breeder's Cooperative which he served from 1977-1985 in various positions including president. He has served as board president for 21st Century Genetics, the successor organization, since last February.

Damm's background includes a Bachelor of Arts degree in Comparative Literature (Wisconsin, 1965), a Master of Arts degree in English Literature (Wisconsin, 1967), and a Ph.D. in English (Miami, Ohio, 1970). Prior to dairy farming, he taught English for two years at the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatchewan. He and his wife Judith have a son Robert, aged 19, and a daughter Brenda, aged 18.

Dick Barth, General Manager of Pennsylvania DHIA, has high regard for Damm. "Bob's experience, maturity, and demonstrated ability to work with people are significant attributes to bring to DHIA. In addition to these assets, he brings a strong dedication to the cooperative system of agriculture, a system that will have its share of challenges in the future.

I expect Bob's contributions will strengthen the cooperative system in Pennsylvania and help DHIA provide the products and services that help dairymen increase their profitability. I look forward to working with Bob and anticipate a long and successful relationship between him and Pennsylvania DHIA."

Grange favors assessment

HARRISBURG – The Pennsylvania State Grange is in favor of maintaining a price support level as an alternative to the Gramm-Rudman dairy cuts. These proposed cuts would mean a loss of at least 40 cents per hundredweight of all milk produced starting March 1 until October 1.

State Master Charles E. Wismer said the Grange is opposed to the Gramm-Rudman cuts on behalf of the dairy farmers. "The dairy farmers would lose $320 million between March and October with the Gramm-Rudman cuts," said Master Wismer. "These cuts are well over the 4.3 percent reduction of the commodity credit corporation," added Master Wismer.

As an alternative, the Grange recommends a maximum 10 cents hundredweight assessment on all milk produced This assessment would cover the Gramm-Rudman mandate and amount to less than $80 million

"The Grange understands legislation will be introduced in Washington, D.C. this week which would authorize this approximate 10 cent assessment and plans to actively support this legislation," said Master Wismer.

"I believe Silo Guard II is partially responsible for this milk income increase due to the fact we've made no changes in our feeding program other than treating our haylage this past year with Silo Guard II.

I began noticing the untreated haylage was 'carmelizing' along with loosing excessive amounts of water. Treatment of the haylage with Silo Guard II eliminated this problem totally. The fed-out haylage now has a fresh, green appearance with a pleasant aroma. Our herd, 200 of which we're milking respond to the treated haylage very well, eagerly clean it up with no hesitation. I feel that the improved silage diet along with closer attention to milking and feeding programs have made the difference. I'm planning to treat other silages this year with Silo Guard II and strongly recommend it to other dairy farmers . . . it sure makes a profitable difference for me," says Jim.

DAIRY CHOW B-38 PROOF

Harold F. Crider & Sons

The Crider's present feeding program consists of corn silage, alfalfa hay, and a Dairy Chow Concentrate B-38 grain mix from Farmers Union Coop. During the past year, their RHA increased 2941 pounds and butterfat increased 100 pounds.

Son Roger assists full time with feeding, breeding and management with additional help from brothers Rodney and Aldean. They contribute their production increase to following the total Purina program of Calf Startena, a Chek-R-Mix grower, and Freshstart D&H Concentrate for heifers and dry cows.
